Beginnings Susan X. Meagher

Seven months, eight months, nine months ... a lifetime. Exchanging gentle kisses at the top of Mt. Tam, Jamie and Ryan declare their love for one another. Studying for exams and training for the AIDS Ride, they experience the tentative fumbblings and frustrations of adjusting to a new relationship. Though Ryan is determined to proceed at a pace that is comfortable for her neophyte partner, their need for each other grows stronger with every passing hour- whether they are together or apart.

"We begin a magical journey. A journey of exploration, a journey of wonder, a journey of commitment. A journey we make together." The speech at the beginning of their 560 mile biking odyssey epitomizes their feelings about the Ride, and about the beginnings of the life they plan to share.

Kennedy says

I am enjoying this series. I like the romance and the build up although you want them to get on with it already. The secondary characters are a bonus and I love the family dynamics, the dog, the baby. Interesting information about food, fitness and preparation for a very long bike ride. On to the next book in the series...

Fiona Andrews says

loved the whole series and am eagerly awaiting the 18th book 'R' I think. The main characters are really likable and the supporting characters always add to the story.

Really enjoying this series (even if I do find it a bit daunting that there are at least another 8 books to go), the characters and the writing are top rate.

I do have to agree with another reviewer that the sexual tense is intense and I was desperate for the consummation (while at the same time loving all of the build up).

Okay the characters are very X&G, but that is no bad thing in my book.

On to No. 3!

Yep, it's a masterclass in writing the longer novel while maintaining interest through-out. Thought this might be the last I'd read in the series but no, I'm hooked!
