From Reader Review The Perfect Murder: Spine-chilling short stories for long summer nights for online ebook

Fiona Watkins says

The short stories themselves rated a higher three stars, however we didn't just get the short stories, instead well over half the book was taken up with taster chapters, or two, of full length novels by the short story authors...not many things irritate me more than that!

Fran says

Why call them short stories when they're taster chapters of upcoming books. Annoying.

Liane says

Some stories were better than others, I personally don't like the samples of other books but the short stories were good and any nice quick read.

Julia says

First couple of stories were quite good but after that it went downhill

Michelle Douglas says

This was a good mix of short stories from several authors. There was an introduction from each author before the short story and there was also the chance to read an excerpt from their upcoming novel too

Helen Lancaster says

Good

Good selection of short stories from famous Authors. I enjoyed it especially Paul Finch whose writing I love. Well done all Authors..

Selina Griffin says

I enjoyed this, the first story, Before Noon was probably my least favourite, I think Him! was probably the one I enjoyed the most, though Act of Contrition was also a really nice piece. Wunderland I enjoyed though I would question its inclusion in the collection.

Terrific for free!

Liam says

All good stories to various degrees

Gary McGibbon says

Just ok. Something to read, that's all. Now to find something far more engrossing!!

---

Kerrian Adebajo says

Quite enjoyable.

I gave 4 star because the stories are told well and I was drawn into what I was reading from start to finish.

Kathryn Parry says

Before noon: four stars.

Times up: five stars

Him!: oh a good one. Five stars

Wunderland: give again.

The Manhattan puzzle: I did not read this one as it was an extract.

The last one was also a four star.

Karen says

I'd heard good things about the writing of Luca Veste so thought that this free kindle book would be a good way to introduce myself to his writing as his short story, 'Time's Up' is included. This was one of the stories I enjoyed the most and have since downloaded two of his books on the strength of the short story. The story I enjoyed the most was 'Him!' By Paul Finch - unputdownable and had me on the edge of my seat. The story I enjoyed the least was 'Before Noon' by Jacqui Rose. It started as a formulaic gangland/crime thriller (which, admittedly, isn't my favourite fiction genre) but by the end it had a touch of the macabre about it and had ventured into horror. It wasn't what I was expecting.

Small but interesting

I would not normally go for a collection of short stories about murder mystery thrillers, personally I prefer the longer format but this was my favourite price of all on amazon for the Kindle – free!

I found the six stories gripping and interesting and an excellent way of introducing these writers to readers to give a flavour of their writing. At the end of each short story has the opening chapters of their next book so you can see their writing and in short buy them.

I enjoyed this little collection and would recommend it for an interesting evening of murder mystery.
