As a child, I liked this book so much that I read it more than ten times.

Roman Kurys says

Childhood is a heck of a weird thing.
If you could call it a thing, I suppose.

Full of never ending wonder, life threatening troubles and the unquenching desire to grow up, be an adult and do what you want.

If someone could have just told me that I had it backwards the whole time. It's only when you're a kid, you are truly free to do what you want. When you are an adult, things become "complicated".

Of course, the problem is that people have told me that when I was a child, but I chose not to believe, since, of course, all adults lie. They want kids to never grow up so that they have someone to rule over, someone to run their errands, someone to boss around.

Well, I beat the system. I never grew up. My body did, however, but believe me when I tell you: Magic is real. All you need is but faith the size of a mustard seed. ;) see what I did there?

That is what this book is. I wish there was an English translation because when I read it the first time I don't think I slept. Side effect was often talking to Sun-rays and moonlight and the intense desire to visit the country of sunray bunnies. I still have that desire. And I'm still waiting for the call.

It will come, I know. When it does, My mind will be open. But I will always remember the lesson I learned from this story: always check your pockets to make sure Mr. Darkness isn't hiding there, covered up, waiting to infiltrate "The Land of the sunray bunnies."
