And when a beautiful tenacious reporter becomes the next target, Zeke has no choice but to stay close to her, until he can find the evil spirit and cross it over.

Kendall Glynn is excited to have her first big story on air, that is until her co-worker tries to strangle his on-air partner then stabs himself in the neck with a pen. When she is attacked again by a stranger who's eyes have turned the same white as her co-worker's she is determined to get to the bottom of what is going on. Soon it becomes less about finding the story behind the spate of murder-suicides and more about staying alive.

Paramedic by day, urban legend by night, Zeke has been on a mission to find and destroy the entity causing havoc in San Francisco. Having treated Kendall after the news attack he is shocked to find her once again at the center of the latest attack. Warning her away from the danger has no effect and the more time he spends with her the less he wants to send her away. But the force he is battling is one he's never come across before in all his years as a Nephilim. Kendall and Zeke find themselves in a dangerous cat-and-mouse game, trying to save innocent lives and not become the next victims themselves.

Nobody's Angel starts off really strong, dropping us right into the aftermath of Kendall's co-worker killing himself on live TV. The plot surrounding these mysterious killings and Kendall's investigation into them was my favorite part. It has some very interesting twists with mystery, detective work and paranormal elements coming together well.

While there is a strong paranormal thread within the mystery plot, it far outweighed the angelic aspect in page time. Even though there are regular chapters from Zeke's point of view, it's only really when Kendall gets the big reveal that we find out more about Zeke's heritage and abilities. Even then she takes it so in stride that not nearly enough questions are asked or answered on the readers behalf. Since this is only novella length I can understand not bogging down the action with big information passages but it's also the first introduction to the world in this series. I came away not really knowing anything more about Zeke other than the fact he could help souls pass and was being hunting by unknown enemies because he was Nephilim.

I liked the set up for the romance between the two. It has a superhero vibe with Zeke's secret identity as the Guardian Angel. The problem is the chemistry between them just didn't work for me. It felt too quick with very little tension or obstacles between them. Kendall feels an instant, all-consuming attraction to Zeke after just one meeting and only holds off being with him because she feels the same pull to his alter ego. Once she realizes they are one and the same it goes from intense lust to all consuming love in a heartbeat and I struggled to make the leap with them.

Nobody's Angel* has an interesting action plot with a writing style that flowed nicely, but the romance between the two main characters was too much, too soon for me.

Who was that masked man? Why is investigative reporter Kendall Glynn seeing him since witnessing a TV anchorman attack his co-worker and then kill himself LIVE, on camera?

Kendall's natural instincts to help, allow her to meet hot paramedic Zeke Reece. He has gotten under her skin for sure. Her natural instincts to sniff out a good story put her in the crosshairs of evil. She is rescued by a dark masked man with superhuman powers. The closer she gets to the answer, the more danger she is in, the more rescuing she needs. Not only does this masked stranger make her heart flutter, but he flies!

Two guys, one Kendall, both are making her heart, imagination and body crazy, until the kiss...Could Zeke and her masked hero be the same man? The kiss tells all. Zeke is nephilim, part human, part angel, hiding out from the wrath of Heaven, all while doing his part to keep humans safe from evil.

Kendall is strong, yet vulnerable. Zeke is definitely 'knight in shining armor' material...a little damaged, alone, and completely taken with Kendall. Both the characters and plot were reader friendly! The dialogue between the two of them was believable, the attraction, hot, but not too hot to handle! Seriously, hot guy with wings...what's not to like? A great read when you're looking for a little romance and a little adventure!

I wanted to like this story, and I thought the beginning showed potential. But this book didn't hold me. In fact, I had to struggle to make it to the end.

It all starts when Kendall watches a co-worker attack another woman then kill himself. He has a strange white glaze over his eyes... and the event thrusts her into the world of spirits and the supernatural. A sexy EMT and a mysterious, masked guardian angel enter her life --and she begins to understand the things she is seeing. Through her investigations, Kendall uncovers the truth about what is eventually revealed to be a string of murder-suicides. And she falls for the sexy Nephilim who spends the entire book trying to save her life.

Sounds pretty good... but it wasn't. That's because the romance failed. I don't know if the guardian angel identity reveal was supposed to be a surprise. I'm hoping it wasn't because it was painfully obvious from the beginning. Then, the way the "love story" progressed was at lightning speed. It's total insta-love with some shallow hero-angst thrown in. I felt nothing for either character and I surely didn't believe in any feelings between them. The sex was over the top, and unexciting since we had virtually no chance for any sexual tension to build.

As for the action/ mystery part of the storyline... it was meh. Not terrible, but again, I just couldn't make myself care.

This wasn't good for me. Maybe if it were a full length book and we had more elapsed time and character development, it might have been better.

Looking for a little superhero in your romance novel? Want a little Lois and Clark action? Well, look no further than Nobody's Angel by Stacy Gail. It has all of that AND a super secret fortress!!!

We meet Kendall Glynn. She's an investigative journalist. Now, I would imagine that writing a sympathetic investigative journalist is a pretty tough job. Usually, they're depicted as heartless jerks. But not so with Kendall. Sure, once she gets her teeth into a story, she's impossible to shake off. She's certainly tough and ballsy but she's also sweet and vulnerable. Kendall is on scene as a couple of her co-workers are doing a news story when things go terribly wrong and people are badly injured. In the aftermath, Kendall is treated for minor injuries by the sexiest paramedic she's ever seen...

Zeke Reece is a paramedic. Also, he's a Nephilim. You know, a half angel-half human? I'm sure some of us have read books featuring Nephilim in the past but this one is a little different. In Nobody's Angel, the Nephilim were destroyed by a big flood back in biblical days. Y'know, the one that lasted around 40 days, give or take? Yep, that's the one. But some survived and Zeke is a descendant of one of the survivors. Zeke believes that God/Heaven hates the Nephilim and (somehow) doesn't know that there are survivors of the flood. So he tries to keep a low profile (no flying unless it's an emergency) and he works to keep San Francisco free from paranormal baddies. See, Zeke thinks that if he keeps them away, that God/Heaven won't take a close look at San Francisco and accidentally see that he exists. If they know he exists, he thinks he will be destroyed.

The attack that happened with Kendall arouses Zeke's suspicions about what prompted the attack. But Kendall saw something strange as well. As she's determined to figure out what the heck is going on and why her colleague flipped out like that. Because they are both, in their own way, hunting the cause of the attack, they end up crossing paths during the investigation and they get closer and closer.

You may be saying, “Ok, ok great but where’s the secret fortress come in??” I really don’t want to give away any more information that I already have, but I promise you that it’s in here! I don’t have many complaints about this book. Only that it was WAY too short! I want more Zeke and Kendall! They were so great together! They had this great teamwork thing going on. Sure, he’s more like the superhero and she’s the human but somehow it works and they really DO make a great team! And oohh they are HOT together too!

I would honestly, truly read this book again. You’ve got some mystery, plenty of laughs and a tidy ending that still teases you about future books. And let’s not forget about the hot stuff! Again, Kendall and Zeke have great chemistry and the Sexy Time is really hot between these two. It’s a little bit of a slow build up but I didn’t really notice it because of all the other action going on. Please do yourself a favor and give this book a chance. I know you won’t regret it!

Maybe not an angel, but definitely a hero. Possibly even a superhero.

Stacy Gail has taken the legend of superman and mixed it with the biblical origin story of the nephilim, the fallen angels, in order to create one gorgeous alpha male.

He’s got his own fortress of solitude, his black mask to hide his identity, his mild-mannered alter ego, but no cape, because it would just get in the way. That whole fallen angels heritage, well, this dude has his own wings to fly with. Wow!

The mild-mannered alter-ego, Zeke spends his days as the most gorgeous EMT that San Francisco has ever seen. He spends his nights sending restless ghosts on their way.

But the ghost that investigative reporter Kendall Glynn sees transform her friend into a rabid murderer refuses to be caught. So Zeke appoints himself Kendall’s protector, just to keep her from becoming the geist’s next victim.

Yeah, right. Pull the other one.

It’s really because he can’t make himself resist her. Lucky for him, the feeling is mutual. Even if Kendall does worry that she’s falling for two men for a bit, Zeke the hunky EMT, and the mysterious Guardian Angel who keeps rescuing her.

While she chases a story about multiple crazed murder-suicides by seemingly normal folks who get possessed by spirits.

Turns out there’s a new wizard in town, and he’s out to play games with everyone who ever did him wrong. And well, just plain everyone. Unless Zeke and Kendall stop him first.

Escape Rating B: Nobody’s Angel is short and sinfully delicious. It’s the first novella in Gail’s Earth Angels series, and I’m happy that the next books are a bit longer. I liked this one but I wanted just a tad more story.

Zeke's heritage is sad, and yet so cool. He's Superman but with a tragic, and slightly biblical backstory instead of the tragic extraterrestrial backstory. His status as a fallen angel descendant gives him some serious self-esteem issues.

Kendall is just a bit too good to be true. She's perfect at everything, and she can see spirits! She and Zeke fall into the insta-love trope/trap, which made for terrific chemistry, hot sex and a quick story, but I'd like to have seen a bit more effort to make their bond real, or real-er.

But I still can't wait for the next book in the series, Savage Angel, in February.

Kendall Glynn witness the suicide of her co-report during a live newscast. She watches her friends eyes white over, grab a pen and jab himself in the jugular. Horrified why her friend would do such a thing, Kendall's investigative tendencies take over. Her research into this bizarre behavior leads Kendall into a world she never new existed and gives her with more unanswerable questions.

Zeke Reece is Nephilim and a paramedic. Trying to keep his existence secret from the heavens, he cleans up any wayward souls and sends them on their way. When he sees all these murder – suicides, he realizes that some unusual force is directly responsible. When Kendall gets involved and is targeted by the evil, Zeke has no choice but to stay close to protect her.

Kendall and Zeke together must figure out who is behind these attacks before Kendall (now an obvious target) is the next victim.

This is a novella length story with a nice change up from your average hero. The Nephilim aspect was a fantastic twist to a haunting storyline. I enjoy this story but found it a little rushed and short...I wanted more. Stacy Gail did do a terrific job fitting a lot into Nobody's Angel and I am definitely looking for to reading more about the Nephilim's hidden among us. 4 stars.

I have a deep, dark secret to admit to. Prepare yourself. I am smitten. Both with Stacy Gail's writing and the fact that the beautiful man on the cover of this book is not waxed to within an inch of his life. *swoon* Also, his wings are kinda awesome.

Now, Kendall and Zeke have this smoldering longing going on. The type that makes you want them to smoosh together in a small, enclosed space and possibly get sweaty. Or just kiss. Whichever. They have the sneaking looks and the throbbing loins and all that other stuff that's pure awesome. I'm a sucker for this type of smolder. An absolute sucker.

*ahem* Right. So, Zeke's ancestry and the gifts he's been given are intriguing. Kendall's probing, investigative-type questions about the consequences of using his gifts opened up a whole world of possibilities that I hope we get to explore with others of his kind in later books.

The book was just flat out fun. It was dark, often dangerous, and definitely sexy. Stacy Gail has created a compelling set of characters and a bad guy that was skin-crawlingly creepy. I'm ready for the next book.

To create Nobody's Angel the first book in Stacy Gail's new fiery hot Earth Angel series you will need to take one smoking hot descendant of the Nephilim, a little Supernatural, part superhero and then stir in an investigative journalist named Kendall who just has to know the how, what and why of everything! Gail's first book in this series was highly entertaining, completely swoon-worthy and held me completely captive. It is the perfect escape on an icy cold night!

The tale begins with a horrific on air attempted murder and successful suicide. Kendall Glynn was on cloud nine as her friend and colleague began reading her report about a rash of murder-suicides live on air; that is until he begins to try to kill his anchor partner all while screaming, "Somebody stop me!" Kendall is able to thwart the murder attempt but isn't fast enough to stop her friend from killing himself with a pen to the jugular. As Kendall goes into shock in the aftermath, she tries to work out what she saw. Just before he snapped a white veil covered his eyes that no one else seems to have seen. If she did not know better she would say he was possessed. Zeke Reece is the paramedic on duty and he checks out Kendall all the while asking her questions about her friend's eyes. He knows something and Kendall needs answers. Zeke knows a lot more than Kendall thinks but he's determined to keep her safe and the ooh-la-la tale that unfolds was so much fun.

First I have to tell you that I loved Kendall and Zeke. Kendall is a rocking investigative reporter who is really good at connecting the pieces even if it ends up putting her in the middle of things. Zeke is smexy walking and a Nephilim to boot. He spends his time protecting the city of San Francisco from malevolent forces. By day he is a paramedic and your average drop dead, abs of steel guy. By night he is the masked hero known as the Guardian Angel. He has this whole Batman-Superman vibe right down to his crib and while these are all elements that felt familiar Gail's made it her own. The characters were lovable and had depth. Zeke is not perfect and he has some emotional baggage which just made him all the more desirable. The banter, sexual chemistry and escapades of these two really worked and I was quickly caught up in their story.

Nobody's Angel was a delightful, fun escape. While a lot of the elements were not new, Gail added her own special ingredients to the mix and gave me characters and a storyline that held me captive and made me smile. Kendall's view on coffee and her witty one-liners made me laugh aloud. Zeke was the perfect superhero. I mean who doesn't like a smexy dark-haired man who saves the day and makes your toes curl? The tale behind the murder-suicides was fascinating and I loved the supernatural elements. I liked Gail's approach to Angel mythology and look forward to seeing where she takes this series.

I want to thank the author for sending this ARC in exchange for my unbiased review.

I went into this with low expectation and I have to say I came out the other side pleasantly surprised, this book is quite a little gem. I have heard next to nothing about it and am glad that I took the chance and requested a review copy from Netgalley.

Nobody's Angel is one of those books that just seem to get everything right. It was just the right length, its plot kept me entertained and I didn't bore of it at all. The writing was good and I liked that Gail took this into some dark places.

The characters were awesome, Kendall was exactly the kind of woman I like. She is smart, sensible and brave. She is not over the top or over dramatic, she is also sweet and funny and I just couldn't stop myself from liking her.

Zeke was amazing. I have a fascination with tall, big men (not overly muscular men, just big built men) which is exactly what Zeke was. I also have a thing for masked men (probably due to my infatuation with Phantom of the Opera) so he ticked all my boxes. Zeke is strong and tough but there is also a sense of vulnerability about him which endeared him to me even more.

The romance between them was brilliant and I really liked them together.

Nobody's Angel was a great surprise and I really, really enjoyed it. I cannot wait for the next book in the series.

Nobody's Angel needed at least 100 more pages. There was something to the plot but everything happened very fast! I can't believe the heroine just accepted him so easily after knowing him for a few days. And it was unbelievable the way she immediately found who was behind the attacks.

Not sure if I'll continue the series.

A satisfying mix of urban fantasy and superhero action!

From the cover alone, I was already expecting a storyline featuring angels, or nephilims at least. Truth be told, I was expecting that the story would simply contribute to the bandwagon of prevailing stories about nephilims. Well, I'm pretty psyched that I was proven wrong.

Let's just say that the male lead character, Zeke Reece, is a man of contradiction. He's not really an angel, but he's not really a man either. He plays hero but he's got a personal interest in why he's doing it, so he's not exactly as selfless as most heroes are.

Then there's the female lead, the stubborn journalist Kendall Glynn. I love the fact that even though she could be rattled and scared at one instance, she still stands back up and continue whatever it is that she does best: to investigate. I love strong female heroines who are not easily scared and Kendall is definitely one.

Together, they work to uncover the mystery of the series of random deaths which are actually interconnected with one another. They both have their own agenda in wanting to uncover the culprit behind the deaths, but then again, two heads are better than one. Also, it doesn't hurt that they're attracted to each other.

Oh, I also love the bit where Kendall was falling for two different sides of one man. It was definitely a nice touch. Although it's not exactly original but this book kinda made it worth my while to read about it.

What else?

Ah, yes! Probably the best thing about this book is the fact that it combines a hero and an angel in the male lead. I mean, aside from being an eye-candy, Zeke Reece is the perfect combination of vulnerability and strength. He's different, and he knows it. It sets him apart from humanity, but it doesn't really bring a superiority complex. In fact, it makes him feel alienated, but instead of being bitter about it, he even becomes a hero. Like I said, a man of contradictions.

For fans of paranormal romances who are looking for something different, I highly recommend this one! It does not feature the usual slew of paranormal critters, but has just enough paranormal background to make you want to stay and read.

When reporter Kendall watches her friend and colleague kill himself on live TV she knows something strange is going on. Even if she hadn't seen a strange sheen to his eyes before it happened there is no way she will believe that the man she knew would act in such a crazy manner. Her investigative instincts kick in and she is determined to uncover exactly what happened to him and see if there is a link between his death and a recent spate of murder/suicides. Zeke is a descendant of fallen angels who spends his time protecting the inhabitants of San Francisco from ghosts and other paranormal creatures. He was already tracking the entity that caused the death of Kendall's friend but now she has put herself in harm's way he knows he is the only one who can protect her. As the danger increases so does the attraction between them but can Zeke keep Kendall safe long enough for them to stop whatever is causing the deaths?

Nobody's Angel is the first story in Stacy Gail's new Earth Angels series and it gets things off to a great start. At around 90 pages it is a fairly short story so I do still have some questions about the world and the mythology but I still really enjoyed it and am looking forward to learning more as the series continues. I really enjoyed the romance between Kendall and Zeke but I did find myself wishing for more pages because I'd have liked their relationship to have developed a little more slowly. I'm glad to see that the next book in the series is much longer (about 170 pages) though and I can't wait to pick up Savage Angel.

Kendall is a strong and intelligent woman who is determined to find out what is really happening in her town. She is brave enough to go after forces that she doesn't understand but she isn't too stupid to accept help when she realises that she needs it. Zeke is part paramedic, part superhero and all sexy alpha male! During the day he works as an EMT, in fact he first meets Kendall when he treats her injuries after her friend's death, but at night he dons a mask and cloak to protect the city from ghosts and other paranormal beings. Zeke definitely has the sexy superhero vibe going for him and I can't deny developing a bit of a crush. I've already mentioned that the romance develops fairly quickly between them but I found myself really enjoying the banter between them and the way Zeke tries to keep his identity a secret from her.

Nobody's Angel has a bit of everything - interesting mythology, action and fight scenes and a fun romance. There is a lot going on in those 90 pages! I'm looking forward to continuing the series and spending more time in the world Stacy Gail has created. If you're looking for a fun, hot read that you can devour when you have limited reading time then this is perfect and I'd definitely recommend giving it a try.

3 Stars! Okay, but it needed something more!

This was sort of like an angelic take on The Lone Ranger and Superman. Didn't quite understand the whole masked man thing. It was a short, so I have to cut the author some slack as far as character development and plot goes. It just didn't grab me like I hoped it would...like the cover did...5 stars for the cover!!

I might try another one in the series, maybe the next one will be better.
