Hunger Jacquelyn Frank

Two strangers—one warm and human, the other deadly and craving—become pawns in an all-out vampire war as this series from the New York Times bestselling author of the Nightwalkers saga heats up.

As an energy vampire, Halo enjoys the chase for human blood—if it's pure and consensual. But Halo goes from hunter to hunted when he is knocked unconscious and taken hostage by vicious sycophants. As he comes to, he realizes that he's naked, starving, and trapped in a sealed room. With him is a deliciously human female, tempting him to feed—except her blood is heady with the scent of poisonous drugs. Never has nourishment been so near, yet so far . . . and it's all part of the sycophants' sick game.

The last thing Felice Mendoza remembers is everything going black. She awakens stripped, drugged, exposed, and alone—with a vampire. Halo is at once savage and tender, terrifying and alluring. Felice senses that her only chance to escape depends upon his survival. Given the choice between Halo and his enemies, Felice surrenders to his ravenous hunger. It's a calculated risk—and a delirious pleasure. As Felice is ushered into a world as dangerous as it is desirable, their fight for deliverance is only the beginning.

This storyline has so much potential. I love the idea of energy vampires and their origin, but I felt that the story fell short in delivering in the chemistry between the protagonists.

The story was okay but predictable.

I'm sad because I really enjoyed this author's previous work, but unfortunately, this book just didn't connect with me.

"An ARC of this book has been provided by the publisher via Netgalley in exchange for an honest review."

Desi says

The referencing of "her jiggly bits" the author kept doing was hella annoying.

Additionally, I really could not fathom why he was "rendering rifles useless" by bending the nozzles and flinging them away instead of just using the guns on his attackers. Fistfights are for movies and mostly as a fight scene affectation. I'm not sure why the book needed one.

Also is Jacquelyn Frank using a ghost writer? Her books have lost a lot of their depth, the deft hand with language and even the dialogue is sub par these days.

It's like the latter years of tortuously bad books by Lynsay Sands, with the painful writing style, dick characters, insta love and illogical plots.

I really needed saving sometimes trying to get through reading this. I mean puh-lease at some of these cheesy lines!

... ... "It occupied him long enough to allow Halo to use martial arts to stun him the rest of the way. He was well trained in all kinds of styles, having devoted nearly a decade to the learning process, a time when he had done nothing but immerse himself in the arts. He had even trained in the classes of the late and great Bruce Lee. He called on his knowledge of those classes now."

So yah, on top of everything else I'm guessing he's a black belt? And really, are we pausing for a paragraph of exposition on his Ninja Training With Monks (sarcastically used phrase) in the middle of ye olde play by play action scene? Arghhh!

Jessica says

So... Hmm, where to start? This one was okay. I have read books by this author that I really liked, then some that I kept waiting for the action to start. This one happened to fall in the second category.

i like the idea. The way the story is it is very dependent on dialogue to keep things going, and sex too. The dialogue to me would have been okay for a story where it wasn't the only thing keeping the story going, but here I feel it needed to be more complex and consistent to the characters. It starts with a man vamp and a human woman kidnapped and trapped together... Oh and they're naked too. No clothes, no sheets, and only a narrow window in which to gauge time and days past. There is starving evamp, and tainted girl. Tainted girl could mean bad bad things for vamp should he lose his control and feed on her heroine tainted energy. Yes, it is one of those, there's lots of cheesy goin' on here.

I feel the the characters fell a bit flat. They didn't seem real, they seemed cookie cutter and convenient to me. I wanted more layers. The woman kinda got on my nerves. The male was mean at times and was forgiven too easily making the woman seem desperate.

i do so like the idea of energy vamps. I like the idea of their history but wish the topic was more explored and more detailed.

It took me nearly 2 weeks to read this book. This is the second book of the Energy Vampire series. I had trouble getting through the first book. I wanted to give the series a decent chance. I just can't seem to get into aliens that were hit by lightening as they crash landed and are now e-vamps that have to suck the energy from humans by biting the back of the neck. Nope, doesn't do it for me.

Plus, it's one of those books that the H is a jerk and keeps rejecting the h but the h doesn't give up and keeps throwing herself at the H until he gives in. I have to SMH at books like this. Any decent self respecting woman would run from that type of man. At least this wasn't like the first book with pages and pages romanticizing the attributes of raw vegetables and 'clean eating'. Gawd, all I could think of reading the first book was that I needed a cookie.

Sonja says

I really didn't care much for the first book in this series, but I wanted to keep giving it a try because some of my absolute favorite books are by this author. But so are some of my least favorite...and this falls into that category. I was bored out of my mind and I can't tell you how many times I rolled my eyes or wanted to bang my head against a wall. So many things kept being repeated and nothing happens !

I did not like Felice at all. She was annoying as hell, a brat, and preachy as fuck. She didn't shut up and she kept telling Halo what he wanted/felt/thought...you name it, she knew best. But worst of all, was her reaction to Halo. Who in their right mind gets turned on and wants to have sex with a guy they just met while they're both naked and LOCKED UP as well as being WATCHED!?!? That was so freakin' ridiculous. Yeah, okay, Halo was hot and nice to look at. But come on! You are locked up with this guy you have never met, held prisoner by someone you don't know, for a reason you have no idea of, and all you can think about is sleeping with your fellow prisoner? And when you think nobody is watching, you do? Give me a break. Then when she finds out about the vampire world, she refuses to let them wipe her memories. Like she's got a damn choice! Then, when she finds out that they let humans that are useful know and remember, she wants to prove she can. Dude. You own an antique shop and have no connections to anyone. What in the world could you possibly offer them?

As for Halo, with the little we got of him in the first book, I liked him. And I still do. He is such a cocky asshole, but a realistic one who didn't sugar coat things and enjoyed his life the way it was. No connections, quick lays, a few drinks, and some good hunting. Which is why I don't buy for a single second his falling in love with Felice. Hell, I don't buy hers either considering the way he treated her. Their relationship felt contrived and forced to me.

So yeah. Halo was hunting the bad vampire from the first story when he let his guard down and got caught instead. Waking up to find himself naked and locked in a room. He finds out he's not the only one they have prisoner, and soon is locked up with naked woman. For literally half the book, the two of them are trapped together. During which time they talk, they argue (a lot), and eventually screw. Because totally appropriate time for that. Before putting the two of them together, they injected Felice with heroin to poison Halo's only food source. They have big plans for him and first they need to make him a rouge. They didn't count on his strength of will to resist feeding from her. Finally the opportunity for their escape presents itself and Halo does what he has to do. After fighting the enemies off, he doesn't even have the energy to stand. So he takes it from Felice, determined not to let the feeling consume him. He will get home, and he will get clean.

After their escape, Halo does maintain control of himself despite the poison now flowing thru him. On their way out, Felice got shot so he takes her to vampire central for help and for safety. But even her having a bullet lodged in her doesn't stop the two of them from wanting to screw...in an elevator. Really people? Anyway. While Felice is getting medical attention, Halo goes off to find out why she was also taken and talk to the queen. Later while he's gone, an explosion goes off there and they finally find out Felice's roll in the whole thing while investigating that. In the end, Halo gets his mark and also the one who set Felice up. I still don't think Halo made the right choice with one thing he did though. Now that she's safe, Halo intends to walk away from her. And that's exactly what he does. But Felice is a petulant child on a mission and she chases after him. Getting what she wants in the end.

I have a good idea who the next book will be about. But gawd, I don't know if I want to read it. These two have killed me with how boring they were...but I'm always a hopeful fool that things might get better. Especially when the author has other great books that I really enjoyed. I guess we'll see.

Hunger is the second book in the newest vampire series by Frank. Now every book I have read from this author has been pretty wonderful, and Hunger was no different, I absolutely fell in love with this book and these "Energy vampires". In Hunger we have a story where both our hero and our heroine wake up having been drugged, kidnapped and naked and forced in the same room together. Halo, our hero of the story, is one of the strongest of their kind. He is an energy vampire, he is trapped in a room with a beautiful and spirited human female whose blood has been tainted and is forbidden for him and he has two choices: Find a way to escape and figure out why he has been taken prisoner or feed on Felice and break one of the most supreme laws of their people. Halo is a man of honor, he may enjoy feeding, but he also upholds the laws of their people. Halo finds that he is drawn to Felice. There is something unique about her, and he needs to figure out why she was picked to be stuck in a room with him. Little chance that its just coincidence. Felice has no clue about energy vampires, but she soon learns of their world and Halo's place in it. Felice has had to deal with a stalker ex boyfriend, move to a new state and make a new life for herself and now she is drawn into a world of the supernatural and where there is danger around the corner.

Hunger was a fabulous story that I didn't want to set aside, I was drawn to these characters and seeing the way they fight their way out of their predicament and the interesting way they end up falling for each other. Halo and Felice are from two different worlds. Felice is a young woman that is a fighter, but she doesn't have a mean bone in her body. She is philosophical at times, she looks at life with a "glass half full", she tends to be a positive thinker. Where our hero is a badass fighter, bad boy to the extreme, one of the strongest and most elite of his kind and doesn't have serious relationships with women, especially not intimate ones. I found the dynamics of their relationship fascinating. Seeing how different they are from each other, and the way they balance each other out. I just loved that, while I was reading this story, the whole Chinese term "yin-yang" kept running through my mind. Because Halo and Felice definitely fit the bill for that. They are so different in so many ways, but they also compliment each other in the right ways.

This world that Jacquelyn Frank has created swept me up pretty quickly in the story, and I was so intrigued by this idea of Energy Vampires. Basically these type of vampires feed off the energy of humans, but only humans that are sweet and clean and healthy. It was a bit different from the regular vampire idea, but still very close to the idea. Only there is no holy water, no mirrors or any myths like that. So I found the world building in this story quite refreshing for a vampire read. I always love it when an author gets a bit creative but still stays true a bit to the actual myths. And I wasn't surprised with how this author handled this story and the world building that takes place. She does like to write those unique paranormal romances that keeps you on edge and she definitely succeeded. Now I know that I need to go pick up Thirst (the first book) because I was so intrigued by Rafe and need to read his book.

Overall Hunger is a romance that you don't want to miss out on if you love plenty of danger, intrigue, a sexy vampire, a fighting heroine and a love story that wins your heart!

Halo is a hunter, one of the best. He lives life fast, loose and with few, if any rules. Love 'em, feed from them and leave 'em, no strings and he is gone. Felice is a strong and warm- hearted woman who has chosen poorly in love. They are strangers, but when both are captured and forced to be together, both Hao and Felice play a dangerous game of attraction under the scrutiny of the unseen enemy. The plan was to use Felice to poison Halo with tainted energy, will he fall to the machinations of a twisted sycophant's plan?

Jacquelyn Frank's HUNGER is the second book in her Energy Vampires series and while the synopsis promises so much intrigue and action, the presentation fell flat for me. How could two naked prisoners not catch one's attention, especially when one is a vampire? These two damaged souls are most definitely attracted to each other, but both of them have baggage, both of them have issues and those issues were repeated over and over again, almost to the point of eye-rolling.

I was disappointed in the flat main characters, but did delight in the supporting characters that came over halfway through this paranormal tale. Slow on action, low on intrigue and pretty tame on the romance that never seems to be as magical as it could have been from an author who usually delivers in spades.

I've been a fan of this authors work since I picked up Jacob about five years ago and her lyrical prose simply enchanted me. The world building, the creativity and imagination to craft an overall plot that would connect numerous books and more than one series still if I think about it blows my mind. Yet I'm like many who have occasionally been dissatisfied with certain books as they haven't lived up to the glorious offerings of previous work. I read the first in this series Thirst and much as I liked the idea the authors execution didn't wow me. However as it introduced Halo (my favourite character from that book) I knew I'd want to read this to see if the author had got into her stride.

Halo is the quintessential bad boy of his world, hard, fast living and deadly. Always bucking the norm and definitely a male who loves women even human ones! Halo is a hunter who never misses as he never gives up but this time he took his eye off the ball and now he will pay the price.

Felice wakes up alone, locked in a room and naked with no recollection of how she got there. Then she's drugged and taken to a room containing an equally naked male who starts pushing all her buttons! He's rude, happily obnoxious and clearly a horn dog but as he's her only ally Felice has no choice but to trust him.

Hmm well the good news is I preferred this to the first book as it didn't continually drag out the clean living concept which incidentally I do think works well here as it taps into recent ideologies. I actually wanted to bang both leads over the head at times as Felice clearly has bad taste in men and honestly hasn't learned. Halo if he told Felice once about his wild lifestyle he did it what felt like a thousand times. Yes we get it Halo believes he is a total stud who doesn't deserve or perhaps even want to settle down. Yet I enjoyed their verbal standoffs, I really quite liked the dialogue that kept this couple going round in circles. I wanted things to move along as they are alone for a lot of the story which made for some cringe worthy moments but no spoilers. Of course they survive but not without getting hurt and that's when Halo gets so possessive and downright horny ! I understand that Halo saves Felice but after everything she's gone through, all that she's learned in the past she's still desperate to feed him? Sheesh woman want him by all means, love him too because yes I understand the deep connection you've forged but please understand that being bitten hurts! There's a little explanation about the origins of these vampires which ok I can go with. Yes I've read the previous book but honestly even if I hadn't I would be able to follow this story easily so yes it I think could work as a standalone. My biggest gripe is the endless time they spent locked up together it just needed perhaps a different pace. I did overall enjoy this story and I like that it's a series that still has legs. Although perhaps I should point out that Halo is quite fond of the F word but as we are hopefully all adults perhaps no one will object.

This voluntary take is of a copy I requested from Netgalley and my thoughts and comments are honest and I believe fair

I have read from Jacquelyn Frank before, her NightWalkers Series is personally one of my favorites! But Hunger fell a bit flat for me personally. There was no connection between Halo and Felice, which was sadly disappointing, because the storyline was brilliant.

Halo is a Vampire Hunter, best in the business until the HUNTER becomes the HUNTED. He is trapped and must find a way out before it's too late. But meets a female along the way that is his undoing.... Felice. This human female has no idea of what lurks in the shadows. These two form a unique bond that makes Halo very protective of this young girl and will stop at nothing to keep her safe. Together they must find a way to escape this hell hole.

Other than the lack of connection between Halo and Felice, I did enjoy this story. Very unique from the other PNR novels out there, lot's of action, steam, and of course a love story. Really excited to see what is in store with the next book.

Hunger, The Energy Vampires Book Two, Jacquelyn Frank

Review from Jeannie Zelos book reviews

Genre: Romance, Sci-fi and fantasy.

I really wanted to like this, I love the vampire romance genre but...it wasn't to be.

I found it really dragged, with the first half covering Halo and Felice in captivity. Just the two of them talking, arguing, bickering with occasional voice overs from the captors, that's all it was. Halo wants to know why he and Felice were taken, thinks he can guess at who's behind it but has no idea where Felice fits in. Frankly by the time I'd got to halfway and they'd finally managed to escape (I think its about 55% they make it out) I didn't care who took them and why, I was tired of the plot, tired of the characters and just wanted it to go somewhere. At 25% I was amazed they were still imprisoned and started flicking forward to see if that was going to be the whole story or if they would ever breakout...

When they finally escaped and met back with the others I still didn't really feel the story was going anywhere. I wasn't convinced of the love between him and Felice, and had lost heart for the whole story.

It felt unreal to me, I know its fantasy but for me the plots and characters have to feel as if they could happen if the setting was real life. It didn't.

I just didn't feel anything for either Halo or Felice, we knew so little about them really, and what did come out didn't make me like them. I think that first half with all its eternal talking everything to death, bickering and Felice's constant changing her mind spoiled it for me. Then would anyone really get the hots for a total stranger when you've been captured, stripped and imprisoned with him? Surely panic and anger would be more likely, not steamy make out sessions knowing the cameras are watching...

Ah well, you win some you lose some, and this was in the lose column for me. Doesn't mean you wont like it, I've loved stories others have 1 and 2 starred, we all want different things to read, have different triggers and things we enjoy in a story.

Stars: Two, novel that just didn't work for me, that I felt was going nowhere for far too long.

It has been a while since I read the last book by Jacquelyn Frank, but still she is one of those authors where after the first few pages you feel like coming home. I was really happy to receive "Hunger" the latest book in the Energy Vampire series for review. It only took me a day and half the night #snicker and I was already done with it. As the Blurb is not yet public it seems my review will be not to deep into the plot.

Mrs. Frank created an interesting setting from page one by throwing the reader into a scene where not only the leading characters but also the reader were at a loss of what had happened and that made the whole thing a lot more interesting. It was easy to get into the story when you are used to the extremely developed worlds this author creates.

I did not read the first book in the series but I read other books from her so I knew what to expect and she did not disappoint. If you want you can read this book as a standalone like I did but I think reading the first book before this would bring def. a little more light into some things in the background of some secondary characters of this novel.

Well I really liked the dynamics of the characters but still I am not able to give the full star rating because I could not involve myself emotionally in the way I would need to give 5 stars. Especially towards the end I had some issues with the female lead. I would have liked it a little better if the male lead would have had more issues with the decisions he made.

The way it was told the whole load of the relationship ended on the shoulders of the female lead and that did not suit the set up of this strong lead. Anyway I am sure lovers of this author will devour this book and love it – so enjoy.

Thank you Netgalley for giving me this novel in exchange for an honest review.

This series is an interesting take on vampires, it has all the brooding, sexiness of blood sucking vamp novels but these are energy vamps. Just as deadly but with a twist.

I'm enjoying this world and this novel was...good...I liked the characters overall and the storyline was fresh. That being said it was slow. Too much time in the "room" and a bit too much angst from the hero for me. I did like the strength the heroine showed when going after what she wanted but my favorite bits were with Danton..and I can't wait for his story. ..

I think overall the story could have been stronger, there felt like a lot of filler and with a bit more edits this could have been crafted into one of her best.

3 stars from this lover of all things vamp.

Halo lives his life full tilt with a ton of women in his wake. When he is captured he is forced to share his captivity with Felice, a person who has made some really bad love connections.

Their captors want to poison Halo with “tainted” energy from Felice so that is why they are imprisoned naked together. Damaged souls, imprisoned and naked...can it get any worse?

Hunger has a great premise but after reading this, the second book in this series, I'm not thinking this series is for me. Like I said the premise is there but zero reader connection because I just couldn't buy into the situation(s) presented with a slow progression as well. Overall, it just fell flat, somewhere in between an Wow... this was a mess. I'm sorry to have to say that. I really am but... wow. I had to FORCE myself to finish this one. I probably should have just called it and relegated this to the DNF list but I rallied and kept going to the bitter end. I think perhaps there were some cool concepts that could have been shaped into something good. However, Hunger just never comes together into anything interesting.

On the other hand, Hunger would make for wonderful source material for a drinking game.

Here are the rules:

1. Drink every time Halo says he's a "hedonist".
2. Drink every time Halo says he doesn't need anyone.
3. Drink every time Felice disregards all evidence and acts like an idiot...

Wait... never mind. If these were the rules for the drinking game then everyone would be shitfaced by approximately 30% through the book. It's that damn repetitive.

Here's the gist of the plot: Halo (an energy vampire) and Felice (a human with lousy taste in men) are being held prisoner - naked - in a warehouse by the bad guy, Roth. I guess energy vampires can only feed on "clean" sources or they turn evil. So the plan is to force heroin into Felice's veins and starve Halo long enough to make him feed on her and turn him evil. Once he's evil Roth and the other evil vampires will set him loose to kill the vampire Queen. However, Halo is all extra strong and escapes along with Felice. The bad guys get defeated and Halo and Felice are in love for a HEA.

I could go on and on about all the problems with Hunger but instead I think I'll just give a list of all the notes I made while reading because I think they're pretty entertaining. THERE WILL BE OUT OF CONTEXT SPOILERS BELOW :

1. Felice! Seriously? You've been taken prisoner, drugged, and left naked and alone with a strange man and you're worried about whether or not you look fat? SERIOUSLY!?
2. Halo's "hedonistic" lifestyle has been mentioned at least 20 times and it's only chapter 2. We freaking get it already...
3. So far I've just been told about how these characters are instead of actually seeing the characters be that way. Also, their personalities are just all over the place. Holy mood swings Batman! One minute Halo is calling Felice sweetheart and the next he's being a complete asshole.
4. Is this whole book a commercial against GMOs disguised as a paranormal romance?
5. O my goodness we get it! Halo likes human women! Most vampires just think of humans as food so I suppose Halo likes to "play with his food." Ha! That was clever... too bad the author didn't think of it.
6. Felice... you are so naïve it's unbelievable.
7. Seriously... you guys are going to bang in room you're being held captive in? I don't see how the situation is at all sexy...?
- 8.

"Good. Because I am ready to fuck you. And you are primed for the fucking."

That's actually pretty funny... I'm not sure if it was on purpose or not.

9. Really Halo! You're trying to bang her while Felice is shot and bleeding? Put your boner away! Now is not the fucking time! She's also been bleeding for a couple hours now and hasn't lost consciousness or anything... how is that even possible?
10. Felice... Halo has been the biggest jerk in the world to you for weeks now. I know you "love" him for some reason but it doesn't excuse his behavior in the least. This naïve bullshit is obnoxious.

So ya... Hunger was such a mess. I just couldn't make myself like it. I feel terrible being so negative in this review. I think it's stemming from the book being pretty poor in quality and me having to force myself to read it. It's just leaving a bad taste in my mouth and causing a lot of resentment. I'm going to try to end this review on one positive note... The cover art is pretty good. So there's that at least...

Romance Between The Sheets says

In Hunger: An Energy Vampire Novel, we get to know Halo. He finds himself kidnapped and taken hostage. He doesn't know why he's been taken or why he is still alive. But he does know that he only has a few days of energy left before he has to feed again.

Felice finds herself in a similar situation. But she is human. She is poisoned and given to Halo to feed off of.

This book is different from the first installment. About the first 60 percent of the book takes place in a room where Halo and Felice are forced to get to know each other. This is a great way for us to figure out what these characters were made of. I really liked Halo's never give up style and he was able to get strength from Felice. Felice is smart and puts up a great front to show how much strength she really has. I also think that helped Halo really see the people who were already around him and that he isn't alone in the world.

This story also had a good mystery to it. I really liked how all was revealed in the end. I also liked that we are getting to see what are the real motives of the phantoms and that there might be a power struggle starting with them.
