Amateur sleuth and dreamwalker Baxley Powell is called in on a stabbing case. She arrives in time to hear the dying man whisper, “Bubba done it.”

Four men named Bubba in Sinclair County, Ga., have close ties to the victim, including her goofball brother-in-law, Bubba Powell.

She dreamwalks for answers, but the dead guy can’t talk to her. Baxley sleuths among the living. The suspects include a down-on-his-luck fisherman, a crackhead evangelist, a politically-connected investor, and her brother-in-law, the former sweetheart of the new widow.

The more Baxley digs, the more the Bubbas start to unravel. Worse, her brother-in-law’s definitely more than friendly with the new widow.

Between petsitting, landscaping, and dreamwalking, Baxley’s got her hands full solving this case.

Denise Zendel says

Baxley Powell is a single mom with an adolescent daughter, a landscaping business, a pet-sitting business and an inherited ability to talk to dead people. She uses that ability in job no. 3, part-time police consultant.

She's riding with the sheriff when a 911 call comes in about a stabbing. They arrive on the scene in time to hear the victim's last words: "Bubba done it." There are four men in town named Bubba who have close ties to the dead guy, including Baxley's brother-in-law. Baxley can't get to the dead man in the spirit world, so she is forced to work among the living to find out who did him in. She really hopes the guilty party isn't her brother-in-law.

I find Baxley fascinating – she's a down-to-earth person who just happens to have this odd ability to speak to the dead and help them and the living move on with their lives. But she does this while working three jobs, taking care of her young daughter, and mourning the loss of her soldier husband. There's a lot going on with Baxley in this book – she can't reach her husband in the spirit world, which makes her think that despite what the government is telling her, he's not dead; and her daughter seems to be talking to dead people too.

I received an ARC from the author with the understanding I would do an honest review. I can honestly say I enjoy this series because the characters are all well-developed, the plots interesting and the paranormal elements are woven into the stories in a plausible way. I want to spend more time with Baxley and the other residents (living and otherwise) in Sinclair County, Georgia.

Baxley is a dreamwalker. She can crossover and talk to the dead. She has taken over the job of dreamwalker with the Sheriff's Department from her Father. The Sheriff takes her to the scene of a 911 call. Morgan is dying from stab wounds and he whispers "Bubba Done It.". Sinclair County, Ga has more than it's fair share of Bubbas. Which Bubba done it?

Baxley is a single mother raising her daughter after the death of her husband in the military. She struggles with her finances, her parents, and her daughter. This is a typical small town where everyone knows you and your family. It is a wonderful way to live but presents challenges too!

I like books with an element of paranormal and this one delivers. It is full of twists and turns. The ending was a total surprise. Curl up in your favorite reading chair and enjoy the journey Maggie Toussaint takes you on.

The last thing Baxley Powell expected when she caught a ride with Sheriff Wayne Thompson was to be dispatched to the scene of a murder. Arriving just in time to catch the dying words of Morgan Gilroy, he declared 'Bubba Done it'. The trouble is, there are a lot of Bubbas in Sinclair County, Georgia, and it seems like all of them have a grudge against the banker, but is that grudge enough to cause them to commit murder? Baxley is the county Dreamwalker. When she uses her talents to reach out to Morgan's spirit, she instead encounters Rose, an angry spirit that prevents Morgan from telling Baxley who killed him. In exchange for a 'favor', Rose agrees to let Morgan tell what he knows. Making deals with the spirits of the dead, can cause a whole world of trouble. But Baxley is desperate. She wants to get to the bottom of the murder. Especially when one of the Bubba's is her Brother-in-law. Baxley and her late husband, Roland have spent years trying to protect Bubba Powell from one harebrained scheme after another. And this time he just might have crossed the line.

Two years earlier, Roland Powell was declared dead by the Army, but no body was ever found. He was a Special Ops soldier deployed overseas when he went missing. But the Army has yet to release his insurance money. This has caused Baxley to find work as a part-time pet walker, part-time landscaper, and occasional police consultant, where she uses her dreamwalking skills to communicate with the dead in hopes of discovering who killed them.

To add to the already volatile situation, Baxley's Father, the county's ex-dreamwalker, and current coroner, performs his own dreamwalk. And while he is in the spirit world, he looks for Roland. In the process, he goes beyond where he can safely travel. It takes the intervention of his daughter and another of the local Bubba's, Bubba Paxton, to bring him back.

Things turn more dangerous when someone begins to threaten Baxley. But getting to the bottom of the murder seems the only way to keep everyone safe. She can't shake to feeling that someone is watching her. But it isn't until she turns her attention June, the long missing daughter of Morgan's brother, Ritchie Gilroy, and friend of Larissa, Baxley's daughter, that things begin to fall into place.

'Bubba Done It' is steeped in small town Southern drama, with a side order of the paranormal. Maggie Toussaint keeps the readers on the edge of their seats as she spins a tale of intrigue.

When a dying banker says that someone nicknamed Bubba stabbed him, he unleashes the sheriff's investigation into a number of townsfolk all of whom share the same moniker. What makes the lawman's task more difficult is that each person has a viable motive. Wayne turns for help to the local Dreamwalker. But when Baxley tries to contact the dead guy in the great beyond, she runs into a dark entity that threatens to pull her into the void forever. Complicating matters are the victim's niece who is missing and her boat that was found abandoned in the marsh. What has happened to the young girl? As Baxley gets closer to the truth, she receives threatening messages and acts of vandalism that are meant to discourage her. But she persists on pursuing justice regardless of her own peril. It's a pleasure to see Baxley's paranormal powers expanding. This unique element adds to the story's mystique. With its cast of quirky characters, Southern setting, and psychic sleuth, Bubba Done It will keep you guessing until the end.

Karla Brandenburg says

Don't let the title fool you into believing this is a redneck hick type of book.

Set in Georgia, Baxley Powell is a probably widow trying to raise her daughter without marketable skills. But she does have the gift passed through to her from her father - she can talk to the dead. As a dog walker, landscaper, she freelances with the sheriff (an old would-be boyfriend from high school) when someone is murdered. The hope is that the dead man will tell her who killed him, but "dreamwalking" on the other side isn't quite that cut and dried.

Baxley's impatience to solve the murder intersects with a young girl's disappearance, her daughter's best friend. Along the journey, she discovers her daughter has inherited some sensitivity of her own. And is Baxley's husband really dead? We ride the roller coaster of Baxley's emotions as she struggles to protect her daughter, to keep herself safe, and to cope with the other distractions of everyday life. Filled with suspense, this well written book keeps you guessing all the way to the end which Bubba Done It.

Vicki Highley says

I was very excited to receive this book for a honest review and I wasn't disappointed. I had read the first book in the series and had really enjoyed it. Baxley Powell is a Dreamwalker, who consults with the local sheriff department. When someone dies in a suspicious manner Baxley will Dreamwalker to find the victim and find out what happened. However, this time the victim is still alive and whispers Bubba Done it. You would think that would be simple but not in Georgia and when you have a brother-in-law named Bubba, who comes under suspicion and a victim who refuses to talk to her on her dream walks. So Baxley decides to help solve the mystery. The book has interesting characters especially Baxley counter culture parents I loved her relationship with them and the frustration she has with them. Baxley would like to just raise her 10 year old daughter and work with plants and animals. If you love paranormal with a mystery or a good mystery with paranormal this the book for you.

This is a terrific book, I loved it! Baxley Powell, a part-time dog walker – landscape artist and the town dreamwalker, is called out to a stabbing. She arrives just in time to hear the victim call out “Bubba done it” with his dying breath. Baxley attempts to dreamwalk in an effort to contact the victim but is unable to locate him. With four guys named Bubba living in town, the sheriff thinks it will be an easy open and shut case especially since he believes the culprit is none other than Baxley's brother-in-law. The more Baxley digs into the lives of the other Bubbas, more information comes to light to make them each look guilty. Baxley has her hands full trying to unravel this mystery.

Maggie Toussaint has written a smart, funny, and deftly written nppl. The story will quickly grab your attention and keep you on the edge of your seat waiting to see what happens next. There are plenty of twists and surprises along the way so you'll be kept guessing until the end. The characters are likable and relatable; people you care what happens to them. This is the second book in the series and can be read as a stand-alone (I haven't read the first book yet and didn't feel lost at all). A very entertaining, engaging story, I highly recommend it!

Rosemary K says

Baxley Powell has a special talent. She's able to dreamwalk. The sheriff uses her ability to track down killers. Will she be able to find out which Bubba killed the banker, Morgan Gilroy? I liked Baxley. She's a single mom who is determined to make sure her daughter grows up in a safe and stable home even though her job is unique. There are so many unanswered questions she needs to find answers to. What happened to her daughter's best friend? Her desire for closure makes her the killer's target. Who in this small town could have done it? The setting and the well written characters pulled me into this story. I was intrigued by the paranormal element. When she encounters dangerous spirits on her dreamwalk, I was intrigued by how powerful Rose Kingsley was. Will she continue to plague Baxley? The small town setting was perfect. It added to the drama. The interaction between the characters provided more suspects. There were so many that I didn't know until the end who the culprit was. I'm enjoying this series (A Dreamwalker Mystery). Margaret Toussaint writing kept me on the edge of my seat. I can't wait for the next book.

As bank president, Morgan Giltoe, lay dying he whispers, "Bubba done it" and Baxley hears him. Immediately she thinks of her brother-in-law, but no he wouldn't have done it. If not him then who? In Sinclair County, GA there are a few. Baxley's dream walking skills will be tested as she seeks to find which "Bubba Done It". This is an exceptional journey into the Paranormal. Maggie Toussaint has a flair for writing well written books with moments of humor, high suspense and guessing which "bubba Done It" until the end. I highly recommend any book written by Ms. Toussaint. She never disappoints her readers.

Dollycas's Thoughts

In this follow up to Gone and Done we find Baxley with her hands full and way too many Bubbas that could be tied up in a recent murder. The sheriff tries to take the easy route by arresting each of them with very little proof which drives Baxley to do a little investigating of her own. Her daydreaming doesn't help much as the victim is unable to talk, so she has to start asking questions putting herself in danger.

I really like Baxley. A strong woman dealing with life the best she can. In addition to dreamwalking and consulting with the local police she does landscaping and pet sitting to provide for herself and her daughter. Her husband has been declared dead by the military but all his benefits are tied up in red tape. There are even some indicators that he may not be dead.

All of the characters, Baxley, her daughter, her parents, the Bubbas and more are very well written. Sheriff

Wayne drives me a bit crazy. I picture him as a Barney Fife from Mayberry, only with more power. He bumbles around this case looking for a quick, easy solution without trying to see the big picture. Just because the dying man whispered, “Bubba done it” doesn’t mean you arrest the first Bubba you see. The South is full of Bubbas. He even pulls one of the out of the hospital having medical tests done just because his name is Bubba. He is more of an arrest first, ask questions later kind of guy. Thank God for Baxley and her butting in, I mean consulting, on the case.

Baxley and her family’s gifts of dreamwalking, crystal powering and ESP connections really flow easily throughout the story. The reader just knows this is their way and it is very natural. I do have to say it was just a little hard to read so soon after losing my son.

This case is tied up by the last page but we still have questions. Is Baxley’s husband alive? and if he is why hasn’t he come home? Does Baxley’s daughter have dreamwalking abilities too? Just how do Baxley’s parents make ends meet? I am anxiously awaiting the next book to find out more about this great cast of characters.

Contemporary, Mystery

Sinclair County, Georgia

Baxley Powell is a consultant for the police where her dreamwalking talent for talking to the dead helps solve murders. It also makes her pet-sitting and landscaping businesses take a back seat.

While Baxley is riding with the sheriff a stabbing call comes in via a 911 call. When they arrive at the scene they find the knife is still in the victim’s chest. The victim is the bank president and with his last breath he whispers “Bubba done it.”

Sinclair County, Georgia, unfortunately is full of Bubbas, four of them. Each one also has ties to the victim. Baxley dreamwalks only to find that the dead banker is forbidden to talk to her. Now Baxley must search among the living. The top suspects are a crack-head evangelist, a politically-connected investor, a down-on-his-luck fisherman and even worse Baxley’s brother-in-law who was also the high school sweetheart of the dead man’s ex-wife.

Baxley finds more connections between each suspect and the victim as she digs for answers. With Baxley’s brother-in-law keeping company with the victim’s ex he also manages to raise suspicions about his involvement.

Baxley need to find the killer because if she doesn’t her brother-in-law could go to jail which would let the real killer to get away with it.

This is a fun mystery that keeps taking turns that will have readers guessing just who is behind the murder and why they did it. While readers could read this as a standalone it would be greatly enhanced if they read the first book before this one. Just as readers think they have it figured out another clue comes to light that will have them wondering if they are on the right track or not. The story doesn't let up until the very end. This is a series that will have mystery readers wanting to read the books and eagerly awaiting the next one. The characters are well written and add a lot to the story. This is one series definitely worth checking out.

Loved It!

This is a great book; this is the second book in the Dreamwalker series by Maggie Toussaint. Baxley Powell is a dreamwalker and helps the police solve murders. When she gets a ride with the sheriff, they get a call to help with a stabbing. When she gets there the victim whispers "Bubba Done It" before he dies. For some reason she can't talk to the victim when she dream walks so she has to use her amateur sleuthing skills to find the killer. This book is very entertaining with some southern charm. If you are looking for a great mystery that will leave you guessing until the end then you need to read this book. I am looking forward to reading the next book by this author.

A Review copy was provided to me in exchange for a fair and honest review. The free book held no determination on my personal review.

Yaritza says

This book was invigorating. Couldn't put the book down from the very beginning. This book was well written, with a great plot and mystery. As I read I kept on trying to figure out all the possibilities of who killed Morgan and what exactly happened to June? What kept this story going was that every single Bubba that were suspects all had dealings with Morgan and they all wanted him dead. Morgan was a wealthy man who didn't think of anyone's feelings but himself. I loved that Baxley is an independent woman who can go to the spirit world and be able to see what had occurred at a death scene. She was able to solve the case on her own even though she was warned to stay away from the case. I was very shocked to have known that Morgan's brother was his killer. He definitely was filled with sorrow, pain and anger to have killed him. Hoping to read another book with Baxley. Great read you don't want to miss it.

Judy Pflueger says

I really liked this murder mystery. It had a bit of humor in it and left out the gore. It keeps the reader guessing and trying to figure who is the guilty party. As the murder victim took his last breath, he said, "Bubba done it." There are quite a few Bubbas in the county and each of them had a motive. There are some twists and you will want to read the book all the way through.
