Good for Back to School program - animals going to school anticipate snacks, but have a lot of fun with what they are learning.

Large, simple illustrations, easy to see.

Friendship lesson in the book-- and positive about having fun learning and using their imaginations.

Kelly says

I liked the text and the illustrations. It was a very cute farm/school story.

Becky says

First sentence: Zoey wasn't at all like the other chickens. And that's how Sam liked it. "Where are the kids going?" asked Zoey. "It's the first day of school," said Sam. "I've always wanted to go to school..." "You have?" asked Zoey. "Yes!" said Sam. "There are snacks at school."

Premise/plot: Zoey and Sam are back for another adventure. (The first picture book starring these two farm friends was Chicken in Space.) Zoey has plans to open a school. There is great interest among the animals (Sam, Pip, and Henry). Clara, the cow, well she says she's not interested. But. Little ones may notice how she keeps showing up and speaking her opinion! What will Sam's favorite part of school be?

My thoughts: This one was a fun picture book. Zoey is quite a lovable chicken. And Sam is fun as well. Even if he's always thinking about food! Before this year I'd not really paid attention to chickens starring in picture books. But this year alone, I've discovered some GREAT books starring chickens. This one is definitely worth reading.

I like this book better than other school books that have come out lately.

A very silly book. Chicken wants to go to school so she makes her own in the barn. The animals join her and pretend to have school. On the longer side so it would be better for an elementary read aloud.

bookaday #79. Lots of fun on the first day of school on the farm - this might be the first read aloud of the year - will get the students thinking about what school is really about - building community! #TeamPip

Jess Verzello says

What a creative twist and insight to school! I love the finding adventures and building imagination messages integrated into this simple story. Great for any library or classroom!

Olivia Slykhuis says

Womp womp. This was a disappointment. I thought it would be funny and cute and clever. It was a very boring take on a chicken running a classroom for the other barnyard animals. Trying to be more imaginative and inspiring than it is. Not worth bothering with.

Abigail says

Zoey the chicken and her best friend Sam the pig return in this follow-up to their initial adventure, Chicken in Space, and once again, everyone's favorite galline heroine has a plan! Responding to Sam's desire to go to school, just like the children on the farm, Zoey sets up her own classroom in the barn, and soon Sam, Pip the mouse, Clara the cow and Henry the dog are enrolled. Education is never dull, when a chicken is running the school...

Like its predecessor, Chicken in School pairs a humorous, engaging and ultimately heartwarming barnyard tale with appealing artwork. I appreciated the echoes of the earlier book, in Adam Lehrhaupt's text - as ever, Zoey has a plan - and the various ways that Zoey and her pupils describe the uses for books (reading, of course, but also, building the imagination). The artwork from Israeli illustrator Shahar Kober is colorful and cute, ably capturing the droll humor of the story. Recommended to anyone who read and enjoyed the previous book about Zoey and Sam and their adventures together.

Kelly says

Zoey (a chicken) and Sam (a pig) want to go school along with the little kids. So they come up with a plan to create their own school on the farm. The other farm animals join in. Each has their favorite part of school.

It is a neat book that would be good for those children starting school.

Sara Grochowski says

This is an excellent choice for back-to-school reading, especially for Pre-K through Grade 1. Chicken is a delightful character.

Miss Pippi the Librarian says

Barnyard animals are curious about school. Zoey the chicken has an idea and scurries off to create a school in the barn. A fun and silly picture book that is an abbreviated school day.

Reviewed from a library copy.

Miss 3 and I like to explore different books and authors at the library, sometimes around particular topics or themes. We try to get different ones out every week or so; it's fun for both of us to have the variety and to look at a mix of new & favourite authors.

What a fun book! The farmyard animals are jealous the kids get to go to school and create their own school (which also has them thinking about what school means to them). We've read some of the author's other books and enjoyed them as well.

Victoria Irons says

This is a cute story young readers love to hear. The farm animals want to go to school and this happy story shares their version of what school is like. It could be used as a cute way of seeing what the kids think of school and what their ideal day of school would look like.

Hayley says

This book felt like it didn't quite know what story it wanted to tell. Is it a story of how much fun math is? A story about what makes school great? A story about everyone liking different things? Meh.
