So Annoying!!!

First of all let me start by saying that I am invested in the two main characters so I will read the whole series BUT (spoilers mentioned)

Whyyyyyyyyy is the author writing the story like its been 5-10 years instead of 2 months? No one should be starving. There's no need to eat worms. Why are wounds getting infected when there are drug stores everywhere? Why is a newborn not drinking formula instead of watered down veggies? Yet they have chargers for laptop batteries. Arg! The blatant disregard of reality is so darn annoying!

Like I said, I'll finish because I am invested but its taking a lot of willpower to not continually roll my eyes.

Dorothy Leonor says

It's okay but

It's an extinction event people literally fall down and die because of a virus, doable. Like 99% of the population has perished, doable. Small pockets of humanity remains. No zombies, the infected ones die out quickly cause they rot to death. So with only a few thousand people in the whole USA and everybody is starving??? So did all the COSTCO, Sam's Club and every grocery store and warehouse run out of food in a month? It's the dumbest thing I've ever read. This writer needs to be at least a tiny bit more realistic. So stupid.

Starting 100

I really have enjoyed the series. Amy Cross is fantastic - some inconsistencies on some things but a very enjoyable series!

Tina Bailey says

The storyline is still good, but...

The grammatical errors are plenty. It seems this writer is throwing in some political thoughts that I know many will disagree with, but some will certainly agree with how liberals view things and blow small things out of proportion, and big things are all of nothing. Anyway, I will finish the series and hope for a good ending. If that is what the next entails.

Engaging plot with some new twists.

I really got involved with this series and have been reading the past four days. I like the main characters and find myself suffering with them.
I did find a few errors that I can't fix anymore because I only have the app on my kindle. I would be happy to proofread for free.
