Better late than never. This is an awesome book that captures the human emotions at peak. The characters that was portrayed was brilliant enough to fall in love with it. I thoroughly enjoyed the book.

The protagonist of the novel Shivaram while heading to his hometown Puttur, loses his way and by the help of two persons, he lands up in the house of Gopalaiah and Shankari's house. The old couple that lived in that single house for almost their entire lifetime with little or no contact to other human beings. Our protagonist falls in love with the hospitality that he receives in the house of old couple. Though he planned to stay for one night, he was made to extend his stay for almost a week. That's when the tragic story of the old couple reveals.

The old couple like any other couple started their journey in that isolated mountain house. The happy family witnessed the birth of two children a boy and a girl. While they grew up and attained the teenage. The girl got married and within two years, the girl died after complications in her post pregnancy. While the son, went to a different city for his education, never returned to his home even after 12 years. The couple narrated these tragic tales to our protagonist on an every day basis. Listening to their lamentations, the protagonist decides to find their lost son by anyhow and started to remembering the faces that he has met in his journey across the country.

In between this story, there are several light moments and short adventures like visiting the deep insides of forests, hunting a tiger in the traditional way and so on.

Overall, a classic book that no one wants to miss. I would recommend this book to every Kannadiga who wants to drift away to the cold breeze of Dakshina Kannada and reminisce the 1940's. A must read.
