Teresa Mathews says

Pastor John Hagee has once again written a very thought provoking book that delves into Bible Prophesy that most people, non-Christian or Christian, have never heard about. From the very first page I found myself being drawn into it because not only is it an interesting subject for me as a Christian; I found Pastor Hagee's writing was very easy to understand. This is an in-depth study of a subject even life-long Christians find to be daunting yet I never once found myself having to stop and re-read something to understand what he was explaining. Before this book I had never heard of the Four Blood Moons and I have been in church my entire life.

Pastor Hagee lets you know in plain everyday language that what is going to come to pass shortly will place Israel into the limelight even more than ever. So many people through the years have tried to wipe them from the earth but this will never happen. Pastor Hagee goes into great detail not only using the Bible but also history books to prove his point.

If you are curious about the way things are going to play out in the Middle-East you need to pick up a copy of this. You may find this to be a tad frightening yet before you finish it you will know there is an answer to the coming Apocalypse and His name is Jesus, the King of Kings and the Lord of Lords. Thank you Pastor Hagee for once again for sending out a warning for all to be ready when Jesus comes back.

One of my favorite preachers and writers tackles end time prophecy from a totally new viewpoint. Looking at astronomy, specifically full moons, John Hagee hits a home run and opens up a world of new thought and questions regarding the last days.

Without being a spoiler, I'll just say that there have been three times in history that the Four Blood Moons have appeared in the sky. Each incident is connected with one of the Hebrew Festivals, a total solar eclipse, and specific years important to the history of Israel.

In his usual accessible style, Pastor Hagee gives the reader the necessary scriptural evidence to support his research, and that evidence is mind staggering. The most recent occurrence of the four blood moons occurred in 1967... timed to coincide with the 6 Day War, and Israel's recapture of the Holy City, Jerusalem. The next four blood moon cycle is to take place in 2014-2015. And with what's happening on the Geo-Political map today, end time prophecies seem to be falling right into place.

I listen to or read a number of end time teachers, including Irvin Baxter, Perry Stone, and Hal Lindsey. Pastor Hagee, however, is the most learned, the most academic, and the most scripturally correct of them all.

I could go on and on with this incredible story, but I leave it to the reader to find out for yourself. Hagee's book is full of fact and faith. And it is especially timely as we witness the goings on in Syria, Iran, and the rest of the Middle East. Most importantly, John Hagee's message is the Jesus Christ is coming soon, and we must prepare for His return.

I received an e-copy of this book as a publisher's ARC, with the understanding that I would provide a timely and honest review. This review can also be found on Netgalley.com, my blog JonReviewsBooks1.Wordpress.com, and will appear on Amazon.com after the release date.

Contrary to what some non-Christians have commented, this book is NOT about the end of the world. Pastor John Hagee has penned a well-researched and solidly-constructed book about the "Four Blood Moons."

In his venture into the astronomical prophetic signs, God's judgements, prophecy, natural signs of impending change, coming conflicts and the Second Coming. The author specifically focuses on the 'Four Blood Moons (FBMs). He points out that have always were accompanied significant events for the Jewish people. Pastor Hagee delves into the meaning of the 'Four Blood Moons' (the tetrad) occurrence on four Jewish festivals during 2014 and 2015. These will (already started as of the date of this writing) happen on Passover (4/15/14), Feast of the Tabernacles (10/8/14), Passover (4/4/15) and Feast of the Tabernacles (9/28/15). During the previous verifiable occurrences during 1493-94, 1949-50 and 1967-68, the Jewish people have had significant historic events. During the first "Four Blood Moons" the Jewish people were persecuted, expelled, robbed and killed by a misguided Catholic clergy. During the second set of FBMs, the Jewish nation state was established and survived an attack by its neighboring Arab nations. During the third set of FBMs, The Jewish nation won the Six Day war and established itself as a power in the Middle East.

The book does not predict but informs the reader of what has happened in the past and how the current tetrad may fit into biblical prophecy. This is a good book for those who study Jewish history, prophecy and science. read and be informed about the genius of God and his care for the Jewish people.

Hagee believes that the series of lunar eclipses on Jewish holidays during the 2014-2015 Jewish year indicates that something big is going to happen to Israel (and the world). There are all kinds of difficulties with this book. The Jewish year is lunar so the eclipses on Jewish feast dates are not unusual. Historically, there have been many of these four lunar eclipses on feast days within a Jewish year and only three have corresponded to major events for the Jews. There is a huge mis-statement in the book where Hagee says a total solar eclipse happened the day before a lunar eclipse (astronomical impossibility) and NASA web sites show his error (there was a lunar eclipse but no solar one). He contradicts himself in saying, at one point, NASA says there will be no more of the Tetrads (four lunar eclipses) in this century (p. 221)and then says there will be seven more (p. 224-5). You can see other problems with the book at my full review <http://bit.ly/1bq3z7y>. One thing about Hagee, he does not say there "might" or "could" be major happenings during the 2014-15 Jewish year. He says there will be. Time will tell.

I have made the statement before that I don't read enough nonfiction, and when I do, it is rarely prophecy books. This one sounded very intriguing, so when I got the chance to review it, I decided to go for it.

I've never read anything by John Hagee before, but it's obvious that he knows his "stuff." This is a fascinating book, and thought he did a great job of laying out the information he had, I can't put it into my own words to explain it, so you'll have to read the book to understand it for yourself. :-)

He makes a great case for something big happening to Israel some time in 2014-2015. As I said, I can't explain it, but it has to do with four blood moons appearing in relation to the Jewish calendar. He shows times in history when the same phenomenon happened and what was going on with Israel at the time, and it was always something major. I am admittedly a bit of a skeptic with this kind of thing, but Hagee made a believer out of me, and that's not easy.

In addition to laying out his case for something happening in the next two years with Israel, Hagee also gave a lot of history of the persecution of the Jews. Maybe I have just been out of school for too long, but there was a lot of information that I don't remember, such as how much the Jews were persecuted and tortured in Spain, how much the British helped Hitler's cause, and more. I was again reminded that the Jews are God's chosen people, and Hagee helped cement my belief that God will bless those who are good to His chosen people.

I don't often read a book like this in one sitting. That happens with suspense novels, but this book reeled me in and I read through it in one evening, and found it to be a very fascinating and enjoyable read, and one I'd recommend for anyone interested in end time events, and Israel's place in the world and end time events.

Todd Hudnall says

When I read an article about the Four Blood Moons I frankly didn't give it much consideration. I do believe the heavens declare the glory of the Lord (Ps. 19:1) but that's about as much credence as I gave to it. Then following the First Blood Moon (April 15) came the attacks of Hamas on Israel and shortly after the brutal attacks of ISIS on Iraqis Christians, I became more interested and decided to read John Hagee's book.

It's an interesting read. The Four Blood Moons are an unusual phenomena but I'm still uncertain they are the sign of powerful prophetic events unfolding. Yet, if they turn skeptic's attention toward God and draw believers closer to Christ, I commend the book. It certainly does FEEL as if we are living in a historic time and I do know God is ultimately in control and working His-story toward the fulfillment of His Divine plan and purpose.

Maria says

This is the age of non-denominational Christianity - a time where many Christians are shedding the labels they have been carrying. Labels like 'Catholic', 'Anglican', 'Presbyterian', etc. Instead, we see the uniting factors, such as the fact that we believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and that God raised Him from the dead. If we don't have that belief, we're not, in fact, Christians. As the time of the Second Coming of Jesus Christ draws closer, many Christians, with the anointing of the Holy Spirit, are reading the Holy Scriptures and experiencing divine revelation as they do so. I particularly remember the exhilaration I felt the first time I felt the excitement of receiving that revelation - I was reading the psalms and at Psalm 22, I read "My God, my God, why have You forsaken me?" In the denominational church in which I was raised, this verse, which Jesus spoke as He died on the cross, was explained to me to mean that Jesus experienced despair and depression and loss of faith in God, the idea being that we humans shouldn't feel surprised when we feel these things as Jesus felt that way too sometimes. But when I realised that Jesus had actually been quoting scripture as he died - that this psalm, which David the Psalmist had written to describe his depression was actually prophecy about the sacrifice of his divine descendent, Jesus - that explanation was turned on its head. Jesus was actually telling his disciples present - and us too - that, look, He was that man in the Psalm, fulfilling His Mission and saving mankind. Jesus was known to his followers as 'Rabbi' which means 'teacher' and he literally died teaching his followers, even as He gave up His life to save them from the power of death.

Why is the book, FOUR BLOOD MOONS, so significant? Pastor John Hagee, a prominent non-denominational Christian leader from the USA, has been studying Biblical scripture for most of his life and has experienced lots of significant revelation, which is particularly relevant to the times we live in. It's part of his ministry to share what he's learnt. The idea of the stars and planets in the cosmos giving messages to mankind about events to come is nothing new - lots of people in different religious communities in India where I live would tell you that. Pastor Hagee is particular to point out, however, that the reading of the heavenly signs are attributed to astronomy, the science of the study of stars, not astrology, which is the worship of stars. His book, FOUR BLOOD MOONS, in a frank and readable style, shares how the Tetrad, the phenomenon of four full lunar eclipses in one year, those moons appearing red because of a band of infrared light around the earth, has heralded the onset of significant changes in Israel, the land of the Bible, heralding the fulfilment of many Biblical prophecies.

Pastor Hagee makes a very definite case for Christians supporting Israel, as the Christian faith owes its very existence to the Jewish faith. You'll need to keep your Bible by your side as you read this, to enjoy the revelation and see how based in scripture this work of non-fiction actually is.

As a Christian, I've been so saddened to read about how historical Christianity persecuted the Jewish people throughout the millennia. The Bible is a very precious resource for the whole world and it's a testimony to how God cares for His chosen people that they have somehow thrived and survived in spite of the most fearsome persecution. The Bible tells us that we should pray for the peace of Jerusalem and as Jesus Christ, whom Christians follow, is Jewish Himself, I'm sure he wholeheartedly agrees. Because as believers know, Jesus is alive and is our Lord.

This book is highly recommended for people interested in Christianity, Judaism, current affairs, history and Biblical prophecy. That covers a lot of readers. I hope this immensely readable and fascinating book will be widely read, debated and discussed.

I received a review copy of this book in exchange for an honest review.

Robin says

I had never heard of this author before, but a lady from a church I used to attend very kindly insisted I read this book.

I was disappointed. I was furious. I was scared. I was bored out of my skull.

The disappointment and fury are because this book does not in any way, shape or form deserve the accolades my friend accords it. Two points:

1) Though he holds a Diploma of Theology, Hagee does not interpret Scripture correctly.

a) On page 78 he begins by quoting Luke 21.36 (NKJV):

" 'Watch therefore, and pray always that you may be counted worthy to escape all these things that will come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man.'

The point is very clear: if you are not watching for His coming, you will not be counted 'worthy to escape all the things that will come to pass' during the Great Tribulation. If you're not watching for Him, He's not coming for you!"

Hagee quotes the Bible, and then misquotes it to make his point. That right there is enough for me.

Yet, not only this, but as a stated pre-millennialist (p. 66), he's got his facts wrong. The Rapture, in which Christians on earth will rise to meet Christ in the air, takes place before the Great Tribulation. Luke 21.36 here speaks about the Tribulation, yet Hagee takes it out of context to use in giving advice concerning the Rapture.

(Which, by the bye, Christians do not have to worry at all about the Rapture. When it happens, when they are caught up in the air to meet the Lord, they will know. IOW, there doesn't need to be all this 'advice' on watching for Him.)

b) In Luke 7.1-10, Jesus heals the servant of a centurion. In verse 5, the Jewish elders say, the centurion 'loves our nation and has built our synagogue'. On page 5 in his book, Hagee claims that Jesus healed the man's servant because "a Gentile had performed a practical act of kindness to bless Israel and the Jewish people." That statement is incorrect, Mr. Hagee. Jesus never healed anyone because he deserved it. Jesus healed simply because that was a reason He was sent on the earth, and to read anything further into it is to misinterpret Scripture.

There are more examples I could show, but these are enough to prove Hagee wrong, and very suspect.

c) Hagee also seems to have his ideas of believing the Bible backward --

"Why is Genesis 1.1 controversial? Why does the prince of darkness hate this verse and every concept of this verse? Because if you don't believe Genesis 1.1 and trust the Holy Spirit when He tells you of the creation, why would you trust Him when He tells you about the Father's plan of salvation for your eternal soul in John 3.16?" (p. 30)

That to me is not psychologically sound. There are quite a lot of people who've come forward at a revival meeting, or accepted the plan of salvation in a one-on-one testimony, who did not at all believe Scripture. The Spirit convicts their heart, they believe and embrace Him, and then they examine the Bible and come to accept its truth. The Spirit can work without the Bible, but the Bible does not work without the Spirit. (Yes, it is God's word, in and of itself, but it is the Spirit who takes the words and applies them to a person's life.)

2) Hagee holds a BS in History and Education, yet he can't use dates properly. He skips back and forth in his usage of BC and BCE, yet uses AD in several places. Okay, maybe these occurrences are an editorial flub, but it is his name on the book!

On page 17, he makes a big point that he will use the Bible, history, and astronomy -- but not astrology! Yet I notice he doesn't mind using numerology. Page 48 begins a computation of this, that and the other thing leading up to the idea that every 490 years, something historically big happens to the Jewish nation. Only, as you read through his count, the timetable doesn't add up. This happening took 490 years - only, he admits, actually it took a few years longer. This next happening also took 490 years - but, um, it also exceeds the time. Then there are a few 490 year stretches where nothing significant is noted. Yet we are supposed to believe Hagee that something major will positively, definitely happen in upcoming months?

He cites several examples of what's wrong with America, one of which is the "death tax, which can exceed 50 percent of a (property's) value" (p. 134). That's fine and dandy, but though this book was published in 2013, that information is quoted from an article written in 2010! But Hagee doesn't bother to give updated information (though it's easily found online).

... I could go on, but I must admit I'm getting bored again.

And this brings me to being both bored and scared.

See, this lady who loaned me the book for a long time listened to the same preacher I did, who taught the Scripture from the pulpit and in his Sunday School classes. As did his wife, who with this same lady, co-taught the class I attended. So why doesn't this lady see the mistakes and wrong interpretation of Scripture that I do? Why do I see this same lack of learning in other churches? That scares me.

Yes, Hagee DOES preach the Gospel; the plan of salvation is exactly described. Yet I found inaccuracies and questionable ideas on at least every third page. Yes, I know my Biblical theology -- but my friend has had as many opportunities of learning in her church.

And I'm sure other people do too -- yet why is this book so popular? All its 246 pages of text boil down to nothing more than the blurb on the back cover, which can be paraphrased as "Things are going to happen; be watching!" So many find this so amazing and mind-blowing -- but people, Hagee doesn't SAY anything!

Just that between April 2014 and September 2015 there will be four blood moons and a total solar eclipse -- and so we should all be frightened! Aaaaa!

I'm sorry. But this bores me because a) Authors since Hal Lindsey in 1970 with THE LATE, GREAT PLANET EARTH have been expounding this exact message - that something's about to happen; and b) So it is. So it will.

But does that mean we have to go out and spend $14.99 on yet another book about it?

Invaluable and eye-opening, Haggee's straightforward and simply stated study of Jewish history, ancient and recent histories, Biblical prophecy, astronomy, in relation to His natural world signs, is a book everyone should consider reading with thoughts of extended research - which I'm currently doing.

Signs in the heavens, God's natural billboards of sorts, have been speaking to us since man's creation. Moreover, God always gives a warning before he takes drastic actions. Oftentimes - multiple warnings. But mankind hasn't always heeded them. Nor have we always looked up to the heavens for a sign. At least not in first world countries of complacent comforts. All I can say is, if the coinciding of Jewish feasts with the 2015 Tetrad is as Haggee has interpreted, Jews and Christians alike had better be ready. . . .

Alex Shrugged says

"Four Blood Moons" is one of those Christian prophecy books that you see come out every once in a while ("once in a while" being defined as every 30 seconds). It wasn't too bad. It was thoroughly Christian so for myself it held little meaning, but I'm glad I read it just so I know what people are talking about when they talk about the "Four Blood Moons" controversy.

It goes like this: a "Hunter's Moon" or "Blood Moon" occurs frequently enough that we note it but don't pay it heed. Pastor Hagee notes that in the past a certain sequence of Blood Moons have corresponded with some of the best and worst times in Jewish history and he warns of the Rapture (a calling up of Christians souls) very soon.

FYI... I'm Jewish. Keep that in mind as I go along here.

There is a tendency within me to mock this sort of prophetic logic and I'm doing my best to resist mocking because Pastor Hagee seems like a good guy. He supports Israel and the Jews and I don't want to mess with that. BUT I'm also NOT going to support something I think is incorrect and I think Pastor Hagee has made a mistake. It is a common mistake... one made by many Jews I know. It is the common error of "reading in" a certain meaning to events of the past and then attempting to look forward to predict the future. It almost never works and when it does, one cannot tell the difference between prediction and simple random chance.

So... I will comment on the manner in which Pastor Hagee says things and leave other issues for the reader to decide.

1. He does something typical of almost all Christians... he does not draw a distinction between Torah and other scriptures. That is a serious problem and it would be considered a mistake in most Jewish circles. I consider it a mistake.
2. This is not a mistake but it does disqualify the book as having any relevance to Jews... he is writing directly to believing Christians. He sees Jews as having a separate revelation so he does not address the Jews. I appreciate that. So... this is a book FOR CHRISTIANS ONLY.
3. He delves into Jewish subjects but only to the extent that it is important to enlighten Christians about the importance of Jewish holidays which are often unknown to Christians but very important to Jews. He tends to gloss over certain Jewish issues that I think are important but probably to Christians are not important. My sense is that he isn't skipping them because they are unknown to him. He is simplifying.
4. He tends to bounce around quite a bit, citing scripture but not the context in which those citations are made. In Christian circles this is quite common so Christians will be used to it. I found it jarring but then again... he wasn't writing the book with Jews in mind... so fine.

In a Christian context he wasn't being sensational. I think he is worried that with so many things going wrong in the world that the finally calling of all Christian souls may well be upon the world. I don't agree but he wasn't attempting to convince me. I'll let the book speak for itself.

I don't think this book could possibly mislead ANY studied Jew. Perhaps Jews who have no idea how to study might be endangered into heresies but my general sense of non-studied Jews is they know what they don't know and avoid books like this. That is all for the good.

***If you never read another book, this one is not one to miss...something is about to change***

Pastor John Hagee writes, "something is about to change," the subtitle of his new book, Four Blood Moons that releases Tuesday, October 8th. He explores the supernatural connection between the sun, moon and stars, several Jewish Feasts and NASA's discovery of four blood moons known as "Tetrads." He writes about their appearances, April 15 & Oct 8, 2014 and April 4 & Sept 28, 2015: Four Blood Moons and their meanings, in addition to the meaning of the complete solar eclipse on March 20, 2015.

Hagee begins with his 2012 arrival in Puyallup, WA to speak at Night to Honor Israel, sponsored by Pastor Mark Biltz of El Shaddai Ministries and Christians United for Israel. Biltz asked if he had ever studied "...the sun, moon and stars as a source of prophetic revelation?" When Hagee said he hadn't Biltz explained why he believed the skies were God's method of speaking to the world although he believed "no one was listening.”

When Hagee returned home he began his research with Gen. 1:14 where God said the “lights in the heavens were to divide the day and night; and let them be for signs and seasons.” The Hebrew word for “sign” also translates as “signal.” ...Full Review: www.examiner.com/list/four-blood-moon...

Something is about to change...

And unless you've had your head in the sand, you probably know already that many of the signs of the end times are taking place all around us. You need only turn on the news for about a minute to see that the floods, famine, and general unrest in the world is happening daily. The earth is literally crying out for the return of The Lord.

There are tons of books out there on this ever popular, hot topic.

But how do we separate the truth from the mumbo-jumbo?

In John Hagee's latest release, Four Blood Moons, he uses Scripture to point out some very very interesting connections between the Word of God and the world outside our window. He specifically takes a deeper look at the signs in the heavens, the prophecies of Scripture and (something I had never really considered)... the Four Blood Moons.

Sure, most of us have heard of the moon turning to blood in the book of Revelation, but what readers may not be aware of are the occurrences that have taken place throughout history. Hagee highlights these in detail in the book, as they mark significant spiritual events in history. He also brings to light the next time period that we can expect to see these moons again (2014-2015).

What is the prophetic significance of these moons?

What is the common denominator of their appearances in history?

Why do they matter and what do they mean for you and me?

Read FOUR BLOOD MOONS & find out for yourself!

I won this book through GoodReads first read program.

I have always enjoyed books that look at what the Bible says will happen in the end of times and compares it to what is happening in the world today. Authors such as Joel Rosenberg and books like the Harbinger are similar. In the first 2/3 of the book Hagee covers what the Bible says about Israel and what will happen in the Middle East before Jesus comes back for the second time. He uses passages from Ezekiel, Joel, Mathew and Revelation. The final 1/3 of the book talks about the four red moons and what they mean. The four red moons have only happened to coincide with Jewish holidays three times previously. Each time major events have happened with the Jewish people. Another such time is happening in 2014 and 2015. Added to this is another 7 year period in the Jewish calendar which makes September of 2015 a scary and exciting time. This book coincides with The Harbinger which claims something major is going to happen on September 13th 2015. A quick fun read.

Michael White says

This book provides perspectives from both historical and future prophetic fulfillment concerning the nation of Israel and the second coming of Jesus Christ. While Pastor John Hagee is careful not to set a date for Jesus' rapture of the church or His return to set up His Kingdom on earth, Pastor Hagee is nonetheless very informative in his treatment of the very rare occurrences of blood moon tetrads -- which is a series of four blood moons (or total lunar eclipses) in two consecutive years, two per year -- happening on Jewish feast days in history. While the occurrence of a blood moon tetrad is rare, it is even rarer to have a solar eclipse within the tetrad, and rarer still to have a blood moon tetrad that falls on Jewish Feast days. This has happened only three other times in the last 500 years and is set to occur again on the feasts of Passover and Tabernacles in 2014 and 2015. The projected blood moon tetrads for 2014 and 2015 point to something as yet unknown but comparatively very significant for the nation of Israel and the world as a whole. While no one but God can say with any certainty what significant historical event(s) related to Israel will occur in 2014-2015, John Hagee creates immense anticipation for the prophetic student that something really historic and prophetically significant will occur within the next two or three years. It is likely only in retrospect after 2015 that we will be able to discern what this prophetic significance is. I, for one, will be watching.
