This was a really good story, I actually feel bad for the creepy character Ed. If I had the abilities that he had who is to say I wouldn't use them to try and get what I wanted. Don't we all use our unique abilities in a similar fashion? Looks, wit, humor, intellect or psychic abilities all stack up the same when we want something.

Ricardo Matta says

Not my favorite of all his short stories, but as part of the Night Shift collection, it seems to fit in.

Lance Lasalle says

A mild and not really scary horror story. This one resonates a little more than usual: the characters have a little more depth than your average King short.

Kaitlyn (ktxx22) Walker says

This was very close to being a 5 star, but the ending, although empowering left me wanting more.

Sarina says

Excellent for a short horror-ish suspenseful story... All of the characters had depth. Plus, I really liked the way things ended (or not ended)...It does feel good to finally read a good horror after so long.

James says

Excellent book. Majic, thriller, tension, blinded by love!!!!!! What Ed did was wrong. He only did what he couldn't get, couldn't understand. Perhaps, he had the guts to do what other people never could? Didn't make it right, kind of sad, lonely, pathetic even? It is also true, that beauty is only skin deep and there are those that will get whom ever they want based on looks. But, like with everything else, love fades.
