Seriously folks, these are just about the cutest books for young girls out there. Keena is an adorable little girl who makes great choices, but always after figuring them out via these epistolary narratives. This is the third book I've read with my daughter, and I hope that Melissa Thompson writes about ten more!

Maritza Trujillo says

This book is perfect for 3rd-8th grade when the students begin to choose their friends. Drama begins in these grades and this book could probably teach the students a thing or two about who their real friends are. I enjoy this book because it is relevant to younger to middle school aged children. So, it is very versatile.

This book was a fun read & kid appropriate. This story about the Secret Journal Mix Up taught some big lessons. Like never say anything about anyone you don't want repeated to them. Own your mistakes & apologies should be sincere.

Keena is in hot water when she leaves her journal at Tiffany's house. Not only is Tiffany not her friend but Tiffany is mean. Getting Keena's journal back proves difficult after Tiffany uses the journal to blackmail Keena into doing whatever she wants. Leaving Linny Keena's best friend feeling left out. However; with some advice from her big brother Brian & a recon mission from her best friend Eric, Keena comes out a champ. She stands up for herself, gets her journal back & gets Tiffany to learn to be nice. Having standup friends like Linny & Eric has Keena counting her blessings!

Mindi says

My daughter (8) is loving these books..

Embrc says

Keena is back in the 3rd installment. She forgets her journal at a classmate's house which leads to distress and anguish. The classmate says she read the journal and tries to blackmail Keena. With her older brother's help Keena recovers the journal. In school her class hosts an author's visit where Keena presents a short speech about friendship to acclaim. Another important theme is family, Keena, her mother and brother together and her father living separately. A successful early chapter book for grades 2-3.

My students and I really love the Keena Ford books. I hope that Melissa Thomson writes more!

Burbank Library Children's Department says

What happens when Keena leaves her super private journal at "mean girl" Tiffany's house? Chaos, but funny, silly chaos that has a happy ending with everyone learning to get along, even Tiffany!
