Susan says

This is a compromise rating. As a story, as a "locked room" mystery, I might have given it a four star. Considering MacDonald's totally unacceptable racist language and stereotypes (and also his inability, at least at this stage of his career, to write "American" dialog), we're looking at one star. A wealthy financier is killed in his office, but how did the murderer escape? Gethryn knows, and he suspects one of the people involved. But he needs proof. At first the racist language was ignorable, but things will get worse as you go along; don't start this unless you have a strong tolerance for this type of thing.
