Robin says

I've had some pretty risque looking covers but this is the first cover I've found myself being self-conscious about. Its really good though. Its actually two short stories one by Mlyn Hurn and the other by Bella Andre. The one by Andre is first and its called Candy Shop. Callie Moore has a one night stand in a commercial fridge at a wedding reception and she thought she's never see the guy again. It turns out he's the consultant she has an appointment with the next day to save her struggling business. Together not only do they save her business but they both receive something they've dreamed of.

The one by Hurn called Valentine Wishes is about jumping to conclusions and mistaken identities and an assumption or two thrown in. Vicky Vale's mother is a Fashion Designer and she (Vicky) walks into her office thinking she'll find her mother but finds a guy instead who seems to be in charge. They both take offense to each other but eventually learn who each other is by the end of the story its yet another happily ever after on Valentine's Day no less.

Both stories were really good and although I haven't looked her up yet I wouldn't mind reading more of Hurn. I know I'll read more Andre.
