It's the inevitable meeting of the sourpusses! Garfield, the reigning cynical cat of newspapers and TV crosses paths with Grumpy Cat, the internet sensation whose scowl endeared herself to the world. Who's the most sarcastic? Well, he likes lasagna and not much else...and she doesn't even like lasagna. Can these two inhabit the same comic book mini-series, let alone the same planet? You'll find out in a trio of issues written by Mark Evanier and illustrated by Steve Uy. We'd say it's the cat's meow but neither of these cats meows.

Albert E Bunce says

Short

I read it in 5 minuets. Even at $1.99 that seems expensive for so little entertainment. Spend your money on something more substantial.

[Shai] The Bibliophage says

So Garfield has a real alive version of him in Grumpy Cat's persona. After reading this first installment in this comics series of the collaboration of Grumpy Cat and Garfield, I immediately searched for Grumpy Cat because I'm not familiar with him/her. It's funny how candid the similarities of the fictional character Garfield to a real life Grumpy Cat. I'm looking forward for the release of the succeeding issues in this series.

As a Garfield fan I wanted to read this.

I read Grump Cat's original comic and sadly this is written like that.

So, I probably won't be continuing unless it's free.

Happily, I only shelled out 49 cents for a digital copy of this on Comixology.

Janette says

Ehh... There's not much to the story, like they are going to drag this out issue by issue with very little substance. One negative to the graphics too is Garfield seemed a little flat and emotionless; especially at the end on the last scene where Grumpy cat and Garfield where stuck in a space and disliked each other...that image of Garfield could have replace any other on the comic. He should have been scowling or pouting.

Gina says

My two favorite grumps! It's just an introduction, basically, but it's cute so far.

Kayla Eklund says

3.5 stars.

Ashly says

While a little crossover seemed cute in theory, in reality it just felt wrong.

There is such a rich history of Garfield comics, and splicing that with a figure who is completely without such was awkward. It felt like Grumpy Cat was attempting to bogart Garfield's show despite the fact that Garfield is, undeniably, the original grumpy cat.

This ended up reading as a very bland attempt. In order to feel more appropriate, Grumpy Cat needs a better developed mythos, one that sets him apart from Garfield whilst respecting that he can never be the glory that Jim Davis created.

Two grumpy cats in one narrative? A fine idea in theory thwarted by under-realized execution.

Mom says

Very cute. I didn't expect the cliffhanger at the end.

Diana says

Big no-no for me. That isn't Garfield, but an imposter who talks too much and doesn't look like him!
