DIAMOND HUNTER: When diamond smuggling leads to murder, diamonds aren't this girl's best friend.

Colorado geologist Petra Paris must clear her father of fraud charges by collecting fresh rock samples at an open pit diamond mine in Canada's far north. When someone tries to frame her with stolen uncut diamonds, Petra needs protection. Local pilot Seth Cooper, an undercover cop with the Diamond Protection Unit, needs access to the mine complex. They strike a deal to have Seth pose as her boyfriend so he can overnight on site to investigate the smuggling operation.

In their bedroom under the midnight sun, Petra fights magnetic desire to sample Seth's rock-hard body. The prospect of intimacy hot enough to heat up the Arctic is a deadly distraction. She needs to focus on her mission. Besides, Seth is commitment-phobic: his job put his ex-wife in danger.

With cops closing in, escape blocked and millions in stolen diamonds at stake, desperate smugglers ramp up to murder. The isolated mine site becomes a death trap. Seth must expose the villains before Petra becomes the next victim.

Author MADELLE MORGAN lived for five adventure-filled years in Yellowknife, Northwest Territories, Canada - The Diamond Capital of North America. An engineer, she flew in small planes to projects throughout the far north, and developed a deep love and respect for the Inuit, Dene and Inuvialuit cultures and people. Years later she "mined" her Arctic adventures to write Diamond Hunter (previously published as Diamond Lust).

This is a well written romantic suspense novel that captured my interest from the first page and kept me engaged until the very last page.

If you like romantic suspense, this is the book for you. Petra, a geologist, works in the extreme Canadian north at a diamond mine. Seth, an undercover officer, is posing as a pilot and wants to pretend to be Petra's boyfriend as a way to stay at the mine camp. There is a problem at the mine and he is responsible for solving the mystery. But Petra, who doesn't date, finds the close quarters unsettling.

One thing I really appreciated about this story was the way the environment played such a large role that it was almost a character on its own. It was interesting to get a glimpse into how an open mine works.

I really enjoyed this book and it is perfect for summer reading.

This romantic suspense novel is very well written and has it all – complex well-developed main characters with many interesting secondary characters, a good suspense plot with several threads that keeps you on the edge of your seat, fast-paced action scenes, and steamy romance. A bonus is the author's knowledge and experience in mining which is exploited in the novel making the novel even more engaging. Madelle is at ease moving from hot romance scenes to thrilling realistic adventure scenes, keeping suspense high throughout. I highly recommend this to anyone who likes a well-written tale of greed, betrayal, murder, lust and love.

This book was my first experience with this author. I found the setting of a tundra diamond drilling camp only accessible by plane to be very unique. The heroine, Petra, was a geologist with a little more spunk than caution. She tended to jump in with both feet only to discover the consequences later. Seth is a RCMP cop undercover as a pilot whose route goes back and forth to the diamond mine. When a chance encounter puts Petra in his path, Seth decides to enlist her help as a cover to get him deeper into the mining operation. Petra reluctantly agrees not realizing how much danger she will be bringing on herself. Seth finds himself constantly trying to keep the impetuous Petra out of trouble while keeping her close to himself. As the two become closer and more involved, it becomes harder for Seth to separate his job and his feelings for Petra.

The story moved along quickly and had plenty of action and chemistry. I enjoyed the details related to the diamond mining and the various plot twists and turns. It was well written and interesting.

I received an ARC from Net Galley in exchange for review.
