Julia says

Although I love cats and their crazy quirks some of these comics made me wonder are these really cat people who drew these comics or are they really dog people who just don't understand the fuzzy minds of our cattish friends? There were a few spots where the comics hit the nail on the head but more or less I didn't find anything to recommend these comics to others.

The illustration point of the comics differs so you have a mixture or artwork with some that are pretty terrible looking in their almost abstract cartoonish ways and others were pretty decent.

All in all it is a nice book that can be rather quick if you are looking for a fast read. Some will have you shaking your head and others will make you agree that sometimes the cat does make for a better story when compared to others.

Just look at the title. Cats + The New Yorker + Cartoons = AWESOME!!!

My parents bought this for me. About fifty percent of the cartoons (which are almost entirely drawn by male cartoonists) just go: 'Bitches be cray over cats'. It's very lazy.

Leslie says

The cat cartoons currently making their way around the world wide web are obviously drawn/written by cartoonists who are committed cat owners/lovers. The "New Yorker" cat cartoonists, however, are cartoonists with little or no knowledge/appreciation of cats and their cartoons reflect that view.

Less funny than you would expect. While "The New Yorker" has added some of the most humorous cartoons to the culture, particularly the classic cartoon showing how a New Yorker view the world where 9th Avenue is rendered in detail while the middle of the United States is a plain prairie. Unfortunately, it seems their cat cartoons are not quite the classics as those on some other topics. The books presents a few laughs but Gary Larsen's work tends to be better on the topic.

Fun illustrations, but not all that funny to me.

Adriana Scarpin says

Apesar de ter nomes estelares entre os desenhistas nessa edição de 1990 creio que a New Yorker foi melhor provida de cartoons sobre gatos nos últimos 25 anos.

There were only a couple that made me smile. Overall this was a disappointment.

actually I have a book of new yorker cat cartoons called cats cats cats that I picked up at a local flea market (no pun intended). it's pretty good, and the two year old likes it. there's nothing as good in it as this one dog cartoon I once saw in the ny showing a dog at a bar ordering a scotch and toilet water, but cats cats cats has its moments.

Not as funny as I thought but still funny

Seemed appropriate to read this as I finished The Portable Dorothy Parker. Mrs. Parker has said that there are "many books supposedly written by cats, though maybe it isn't only supposedly." Who knows?

I got a couple of chuckles out of this, but some I didn't really get. It's a short one, only takes a few minutes to get through.

Book of cat cartoons. Mostly very cute, though the quality of a few may be questionable. Overall a good collection if the New Yorker style of cartoons is what you're looking for.
