The Burden of the Crown Selina Rosen

What makes a leader?

The idea of following her mother as Queen of the Kartik is so distasteful to Jestia that upon learning that her brother has died leaving her the Heir Apparent, she grabs her lover, jumps on a Katabull fishing vessel, and heads for the Kartik-held territories.

Of course, the Katabull believe that only one who doesn't want to rule will make a good leader, which makes Jestia just about perfect.

Sympathizing with the young witch, Tarius the Black helps her to escape her responsibility to the Crown, but when a plot against the kingdom takes what Tarius loves most in the world, she must get Jestia back to the Kartik or all will be lost.

Meredith McLaughlin says

Just buy the damn book already...you won't regret it.

Just when I think she's said all she can say about these people, she tells yet another awesome story. These people are awesome, you'll want them to be your friends. After talking to Selina off & on for 20 years, I can tell you why-she brings out the best in deeply flawed people...herself included.
